SILKS. SILKS.

THE BALANCE OF THE SHIPMENT recently placed in this market, as announced two months ago, is now offered on the same advantageous terms. This magnificent parcel has, it is almost needless to observe, astonished silk buyers, confirmed our advices from London, and our reputation here. The receipt of this consignment has met the test of a discriminating public, and evidenced, far beyond our most sanguine expectations, that the announcement in these columns was a sufficient guarantee to our customers of the unusual value placed before them, and of the enterprise which dictated the extraordinary purchase. No words of ours can, in a fair degree, enhance the fame of these choice goods. We desire, therefore, but to enumerate some of the remaining lines, and to solicit an inspection from any purchaser who may not as yet have favoured us with a call. In view of the COMING HOLIDAYS and CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES, we would direct attention to the fact that this Department offers facilities for THE PURCHASE of a RICH SILK DRESS at a PRICE NEVER BEFORE APPROACHED IN SYDNEY, and which places such within the reach of well nigh every buyer of Drapery.

Black Silks, 2s 6d, 2s 11d, 3s 11d, 4s 6d, 4s 11d, to 9s 6d.

These we can highly recommend, both for appearance and wear.

Foulard Satins and Silks, an immense assortment of colours; also, in black and white, 21½d, 2s 6d, 3s 6d, 3s 9d.

N.B.—This line at 21½d is quite worth double the price we are selling at.

We are also submitting a choice assortment of the latest novelties in Costume lengths.

Richest Brocades with plain Satins, Silks, or Surahs to match, from 3½ to 20 guineas.

FARMER and COMPANY.

FARMER'S NET CASH SYSTEM.

This system certainly offers advantages unknown where credit obtains. Equitable alike to both buyer and seller, it is from its inception, and in its development, possessed of facilities and advantages which fairly command astonishment when contrasted with any results of a credit system. A DIRECT SAVING OF 25 PER CENT. is no mere hyperbole, but a fact seen and realised, and unhesitatingly guaranteed to every one of our patrons. Buyers will do well to investigate the advantages presented by our house, all tending to their especial and ultimate benefit. The prestige secured is ever acting to advance the favour with which our goods are regarded, whilst we are ever attentive in supplying the wants of our patrons.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"'The Royal Middy' was a clever and popular performance, but it is eclipsed in every respect by 'Girofle-Girofla,' for in the latter the cast is more perfect, the auxiliaries more numerous and more picturesque in appearance, and the scenery better. There is not one dull or unnecessary line in the dialogue, while the music, full of taking airs and singularly harmonious concerted numbers, is exhilarating to listen to, and pleasant to remember. Altogether the revival of 'Girofle-Girofla' is a treat to opera-goers."—Sydney Herald, November 13.

"Saturday night's performance was a most successful and highly creditable one, and a score of times during the evening the theatre fairly rang with the applause. 'Girofle-Girofla' is exceedingly well mounted, and the scenery is admirable, so that a prosperous run may be safely predicted."—Telegraph, November 13.

"'Girofle-Girofla' is full of good and pretty music, and abounds in pleasantly popular airs, and when it is well mounted, as in this instance, and well performed by an exceptionally talented company, it is no wonder that the public crowd to hear and see it."—Evening News, November 13.

Opera terminates at 10.45.

Seats can be secured during the day at BUENERBEIN'S, 411, George-street.

VALUABLE TIMBER STATION, AT THE CANNING, IN THE COLONY OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA, FOR SALE.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned up to the 12th day of DECEMBER next for the Purchase of one of the best Jarrah Timber Stations in Western Australia, with all the Machinery, Tools, suitable Workmen's Cottages, Buildings, Horse and Bullock Teams, Timber Whims, Tramway Trucks, Boats, and Working Plant of every description.
The country is ironstone country, in the Darling Range, and the station consists of 100,000 (one hundred thousand) acres of the best timber country in the colony, on which it is estimated that several million loads, of 50 cubic feet, of jarrah may be cut, thus affording work for the present mill, and others which may be erected if desired, for many years beyond the duration of the lease.
The timber is of average long lengths and sizes, and the quality is surpassed by none other in the colony.
There is about 9 (nine) miles of wooden tramway connecting the mill with the landing on the river Canning (distance by road 7 miles from Perth and 10 miles by water), from whence by means of boats the timber is conveyed to ships at Fremantle for export and also to Perth and Fremantle for local trade. In connection with this point a new steam flat is being built, with engine of 20 h.p. nominal.
The machinery on the station is some of it old, but it has been recently put into good order, and is now doing good work; and a new engine of 30 h.p. nom. and other machinery have been ordered and will be on the ground early in the ensuing year.
When this machinery is fixed it is estimated that an average of 15 to 20 loads of timber per day may be converted with ease by the mill, and, in addition, a fair yearly estimate of 100 to 1000 loads of piles and hewn timber may be converted and disposed of.
The cost of production at the mill with the present machinery, including delivery at Fremantle and Perth, and to the ships, and including also wear and tear, is at present 37s 6d to 40s per load; but this cost will be very considerably reduced when the new machinery is on the ground.
There is a great and growing demand for the timber both for export and for home consumption, and the price realised in the market is from £4 to £4 5s per load, thus giving a present clear profit of at least £1 per load on converted timber, and much larger profit on piles and hewn timber, by reason of the smaller cost of production.
The Land is held under Lease from the Crown for a term of 42 years from the 1st of January next, at a fixed rental (including all license fees, &c.), and which rental is calculated and included in the cost of production as above stated.
There is at present 200 acres of freehold land in the hills belonging to the vendor, on which the mill buildings are erected, and the lease gives to the vendor valuable rights of selection of further freehold, and reservations for tramway purposes.
The works at the river landing are also on freehold, and a sufficient quantity of such freehold for the due working of the landing will pass with the station.
The qualities of the Western Australian Jarrah timber are too well known to need remark, and there is a rapidly increasing demand for same outside the colony, while the local trade is also very much increasing.
To large capitalists or to a company, this is an opportunity for investment and realising large profits which is rarely to be met with, and the circumstances of the colony are such that a lapse of a few years only will in all probability very much enhance the value of the property.
The station may be viewed and all further particulars obtained on application to the undersigned.
Liberal terms for payment of purchase money will be made.
The vendor not bound to accept the highest or any tender.
JOS. SHAW,
St. George's-terrace,
Perth, Western Australia.

A. A. DEBNEY and CO.'S "UNIQUE" SHIRTS.
Gentlemen who desire "Unique" Shirts, made specially to measure, would confer a favour on us by ordering as early as possible. Our object is to gain sufficient time for each order to pass through the hands of our Head Seamstress. Our experience is that this system ensures a very much higher standard of excellence than where a short time only is allowed, and each shirt has in consequence to be made without the supervision necessary to secure perfection. No apology need be made by us in proffering this request, as it is obviously as much in the interests of gentlemen as in our own that the superiority of the "Unique" Shirt should be maintained intact.
Stock "Unique" Shirts.—We guarantee every shirt to fit properly, and we keep every size, dressed, and ready for use. Price, from 6s each.

NORTH SHORE.—Stone HOUSE of 8 rooms, outoffices, and land, for SALE, on easy terms; splendidly situated near the Lavender Bay ferry. Address Fine View, Herald Office.

FOR SALE, the ESTATE of the late Mr. Patrick Kelly, Eagle Vale, at an early date, of which particulars will be duly given. A valuable FARM, situated on the heights above Campbelltown, in the direction of Badgally Hill, one and a quarter mile from the railway station, to which there is a good road. It is well fenced, well grassed, magnificently timbered with iron bark, and a never-failing supply of fresh water; added to this the site being high, open to the east, and sheltered from the westerly winds, renders it a most promising spot for the growth of grapes, for which the vicinity is famous. There is also a good four-roomed cottage upon it and a commodious barn. The above farm contains about one hundred and three acres of land, of which about forty have been cleared, so that intending purchasers may look forward not only to a large area of virgin soil, but to a large amount of very valuable timber.

PARLIAMENT OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

Thursday, November 16.

The President took the chair at half-past 4.

PAPERS.

Mr. A. Campbell (Postmaster-General) laid upon the table a return showing the strength and distribution of the police force on 30th September, 1882, and a return of cases tried during the past and present years, at the Quarter Sessions, Sydney, and in the Supreme Court, at each gaol delivery.

It was ordered that the documents be printed.

FIFTH CLASS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Mr. W. H. SUTTOR moved,—"That there be laid upon the table of this House a return showing the numbers and ages of all scholars who during the last two quarters have passed a satisfactory examination in the subjects prescribed for a fifth class in the Public schools in all cities and towns of the colony where Superior schools have been established." He said that in the year 1878 a resolution was passed in the Legislative Assembly for the establishment of Grammar schools at Maitland, Goulburn, and Bathurst; but, so far as he could understand, the Government had done nothing to carry that resolution into effect. A year or two afterwards the Public Schools Act was passed, and in that Act was a clause providing for the establishment of High schools, and certain regulations were made by the Department with reference to these schools. He was one of those who thought that the Government had failed in their duty in not carrying out the resolution of the Assembly, and that there was quite sufficient to warrant them in establishing High schools in the large centres of population. The Government held up to the people of this colony the importance of education, and, having taken the education of the people under their own control, it was their bounden duty to do all they could to increase its advantages.

Mr. STEWART said he would not oppose the motion, but he thought the information, when obtained, would be disappointing to the hon. member. Though the Government had not established High schools, they had given High school education, and they had promised to establish High schools if the people in the localities where they were wanted would guarantee the attendance of fifty scholars. It was a question whether the Government should establish a High school for 20 or 30 scholars, who would receive education of a kind which they could get in a Superior Public school. The high schooling we had was not popular with the public at large. They thought it no good, and it was only a few out of the whole number who sent their children to receive this education; and they did so not because they had any faith in schooling, but because it was the fashion to send the children. They sent them at 14 years of age. Out of 400 scholars in the Sydney Grammar School there were more than 100 under 14 years of age. The consequence was that these lads went back to the lessons they had received in the Public school.

Mr. A. CAMPBELL said the Government would have no objection to furnish the return.

The motion was agreed to.

FIFTH FORM, SUPERIOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Mr. STEWART moved,—"1. That there be laid upon the table of this House a copy of the 'Programme of Lessons' administered during the current quarter in the fifth form of each of the Superior Public schools within the metropolitan district. 2. That a return be prepared and laid upon the table of this House showing the number of scholars in each of the fifth forms referred to above, and how long they generally continue to attend." His object in submitting this motion was to get information. Some people asserted that the Government were not doing their duty with regard to establishing High schools, and on the other hand it was said that the education given in the Superior Public schools was equal to what would be provided in the High schools. Other people, again, clamoured for High schools without knowing what a High school might be, and who did not care about a High school except for the circumstance that it would be such an ornament for the town—it would be such a good thing for trade. Under circumstances such as these it behoved the Government to be very careful before they built a separate school where there would be taught very little more than was taught in the Public schools, and where there was likely to be very few scholars. What salaries would the Government pay to teachers having about thirty scholars? There would be a separate staff of teachers, separate scholars, and separate school. And for what? For all that was learned in the fifth form of the Common school. He was perfectly convinced that some of the applicants for High schools had been induced to sign an application to the Minister simply because it was a High school they wanted, and nothing more. That was a thing the Minister ought to look into. There were upwards of 400 scholars in one of the Grammar schools or High schools of the colony, and it would be found that the Grammar school boys could not read any Latin or Greek but what was found in their school books. Physical science was mentioned in the regulations, but physical science was not taught; it was considered advantageous for boys to go on studying words. There was a most direct illustration of the want of certain education existing now. One of the most magnificent ships in the world was lying at the bottom of the harbour, and no one knew why. Any one who knew the laws of gravitation would tell them why in a minute, without the necessity of an inquiry by a coroner's jury or any one else. This showed how advantageous it was to be aware of the danger of shifting the centre of gravity in such a huge mass. If these scientific ships were to continue to be built, they must have scientific men to manage them. It would be easy to provide such men. About 50 years ago, in Edinburgh, night classes were held, at which natural philosophy was taught. They were intended for mechanics, but other students attended, until the rooms became too small; and he knew that those who attended listened very eagerly to what the lecturer said. He thought something of this kind should be attempted here. If the Government were going beyond primary education, they should provide for teaching physics, chemistry, and, what was equally indispensable, anatomy. They should begin as near home as possible, and they could not begin nearer to it than their own constitutional frames. People died in numbers of instances from ignorance. They shut themselves up in rooms and breathed the same air over and over again, shortening their days, or making their lives miserable. They should, in his opinion, be instructed to avoid doing this kind of thing. He would like to have a debate on this subject, so that they might ascertain what it was most desirable to have taught in their higher schools. He certainly believed that the subjects he had mentioned should precede all others. He understood that the motion was to be amended by making it applicable to all schools, and he might say that he had no objection to this being done.

Mr. DE SALIS thought the matter was an important one, and he supported the motion. He held that if the ordinary principles of science were more generally taught such disasters as that to the Austral might be prevented, as then men connected with such vessels would learn the difference between stable and unstable equilibrium.

Mr. SUTTOR thought hon. members should be thankful for the lecture on gravity which the preceding speakers had given to them, although he feared it was thrown away, as the quality of gravity was pretty generally understood in that House. (Laughter.) With regard to their higher schools, he thought the question of convenience and space should be considered. Take for instance the case of the school at Bathurst, containing 900 pupils. It would be much more convenient if the foremost amongst these could be educated in a separate building. They would then be better educated than if they remained ranged with their 800 companions who were not so far advanced. He moved the omission of the words "within the metropolitan district," so that the motion might apply to all the Superior schools of the colony.

Mr. A. CAMPBELL said the Government would be prepared to furnish the returns if the House thought it desirable. He had listened with interest to what Mr. Stewart had said, and thought it would be calculated to bring about better ideas of what should be taught in their schools. He thought, however, that at the present it would have been more judicious not to refer to the case of the Austral, as it was not proved what had caused her to sink.

The words proposed to be omittted were struck out, and the motion as amended was agreed to.

CONGREGATIONAL UNION INCORPORATION BILL.

On the motion of Sir Alfred Stephen the amendments made by the Legislative Assembly in this bill were agreed to, and it was ordered that the measure be returned to the Assembly with the usual message.

CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

The House went into Committee of the Whole for the further consideration of this bill in detail, commencing with "Part IV. Perjury and subornation of perjury."

Clause 291 was agreed to without amendment.

Clauses 292 and 293 were, on the motion of Sir Alfred Stephen, incorporated as clause 292, and the following was introduced as clause 293: "Where on any trial under either of the last sections it appears that the accused has made two opposing statements on oath, and the jury find specially that one of them was wilfully false, but they cannot say which of the two, he may be found guilty of perjury or false swearing, as the case may be, notwithstanding."

Clauses 294 and 295 were agreed to without amendment.

Clauses 296—"Whosoever procures or causes any person to make any false statement on oath, if the making of such statement amounts in law to perjury, or is or shall be by any Act punishable as perjury, shall be guilty of subornation of perjury, and be liable to be punished as if the offender had himself been convicted of perjury."

On the motion of Sir Alfred Stephen, and after some discussion, the following words were added to the clause:—"And whosoever persuades or induces, or endeavours to persuade or induce, any person to make a false statement on oath in a judicial proceeding, before any court or justice or coroner, shall be liable to penal servitude for a term not exceeding three years. And whosoever, without lawful cause, persuades or induces, or endeavours to persuade or induce, any person to abstain from giving evidence or attending as a witness in any such proceeding, such person being bound by recognisance or subpoena so to attend, shall be liable to imprisonment for any term not exceeding three years."

Part VII.—Abettors and Accessories.—Clauses 302 to 306 were passed as read. Part VIII.—Pleading Procedure and Evidence.—Clauses 307 to 341 were passed as read.

Clause 342 was proposed as follows:—"Every accused person shall in all courts be admitted to make full answer and defence by counsel or by attorney or by agent, upon the presiding judge or justice being satisfied that such agent is a person of good repute, and that the decorum of the court will not be interfered with by his appearing, and in every case may reserve his address until the close of the evidence for the defence, and in the latter case all evidence in reply for the Crown shall be given before such address. And in all proceedings before justices the accused shall be admitted to make full answer and defence, and to have all witnesses examined and cross-examined by council, attorney, or agent authorised as aforesaid."

Mr. A. CAMPBELL pointed out that in this clause a very important alteration of the present practice in the courts had been made by empowering agents, as well as counsel or attorneys, to appear and defend prisoners. He had no doubt that hon. members had fully considered this question, and were prepared to deal with it. He was prepared to accept the decision of the House upon it, and, if hon. members pleased, without debate.

Mr. WEBB thought it would be well to amend the clause by inserting, in the first part, the word "himself," as otherwise the wording of the clause appeared to prevent a prisoner from defending himself, and to provide that his defence must be by counsel, attorney, or agent.

Sir A. STEPHEN said there could be no doubt that any man charged with crime could defend himself. The clause was exactly the same as the law in England, except with regard to a word which it would be his duty to ask the House to omit. He moved the omission of the following words, "or by attorney or by agent, upon the presiding judge or justice being satisfied that such agent is a person of good repute, and that the decorum of the court will not be interfered with by his appearing." By the interpretation clause of the bill it was provided that the word "counsel" should include "attorney in all courts where attorneys practise or shall hereafter practise as counsel," and if attorneys were to be allowed to appear in all courts, let the question be debated upon a separate bill; it had nothing to do with the criminal law.

Mr. G. H. COX said he would oppose the amendment. This matter had been debated to a very considerable extent elsewhere, and passed by a considerable majority. There were many parts of the country where there might be only one, or at the most two, attorneys in the district, and at the time when a case came on at the Court of Petty Sessions or the District Court, one of these attorneys might be absent. It was then a great advantage for an articled clerk to appear, and if the term "agent" were confined to "articled clerk," it would result in great benefit to the community.

Mr. PIDDINGTON thought the amendment went further than some members desired. As far as he was concerned, he was not prepared to vote in favour of agents being permitted to defend accused persons; but he did not object to such permission being granted to attorneys. He would suggest that Sir Alfred Stephen should withdraw his amendment, so that the House might decide whether the words "or by attorney" should be retained or not.

Sir Alfred Stephen expressed his concurrence in such a course, and the amendment was withdrawn; whereupon it was proposed that the words "or by attorney" be omitted.

Mr. WEBB said he believed in the principle adopted in the Lower House. He had known many cases in which persons had to pay enormous sums to obtain professional men to appear for them. Within the last few weeks, a gentleman had to pay 50 guineas to a counsel to appear for him for part of a day at Bathurst, and this gentleman declined to do so for less than that amount. He had known cases in which from £200 to £300 was demanded by barristers for a trip 200 or 300 miles into the country. People might be committed on the most trivial grounds, as in the first case he had mentioned, and in asserting their rights they were put to enormous expense. Barristers took fees in connection with perhaps a dozen cases, and yet only appeared in one, and he had long thought that the monopoly they enjoyed should be broken down. To extend the principle of the clause to solicitors only would be undesirable, for many of these were not reputable, and he thought that provision might be made by which such characters might be superseded by agents who might be of good service to accused persons. In dealing with criminals he thought they could well afford to allow them to choose who should defend them, especially as the Judge must approve of those they engaged. If they struck out the words "or by attorney," he thought attorneys might be placed at a disadvantage as compared with agents.

After some remarks from Mr. PIDDINGTON, who was not in favour of agents defending criminals,

Mr. STEWART said that if the procedure of the Courts had been satisfactory, this proposal to admit solicitors and agents to defend prisoners would not have been made. It was because barristers and solicitors did not do their duty that an attempt was being made to do without them. He understood that people in the country had great difficulty in obtaining justice because barristers would not go there, and attorneys were not permitted to appear for them. As for the procedure of the Supreme Court, the Judges themselves had condemned it.

Sir A. STEPHEN rose to order, and put it to the hon. member as to whether he was speaking to the question. All the committee had to discuss was whether, in the interests of justice, a prisoner was to be defended by counsel and attorney, as at present, or whether the attorneys were to have different and extended powers, compared with what they had now.

After some discussion upon the point of order,

Mr. STEWART said he was against any amendment of the clause, and he did not agree with the proposal to strike out the word "attorney," as attorneys might be very useful in the defence of prisoners in the country. And if a prisoner could not employ a barrister or an attorney, why should he not be allowed to employ an agent? The omission of this provision from the bill would probably occasion the loss of the measure when it was returned to the Assembly.

Mr. NORTON said the question of admitting attorneys to appear as counsel was quite outside the bill. He was not prepared to say that attorneys should have all the privileges of counsel; he saw advantages and disadvantages in it. If he were not a professional man he would say that attorneys should have the same privileges, but being an attorney, he had more difficulty in coming to a conclusion. Though this matter was outside the bill, it should be remembered that the other House had introduced the alteration, and that it had been passed after very full discussion. On that ground he was prepared to give up his objection that the question ought not to be dealt with in this bill, and he was prepared to deal with it now. The privileges which attorneys enjoyed in practising in the courts were really for the benefit of the public, and he would vote for the attorneys having the same privileges as counsel.

Mr. G. H. COX pointed out that in a place like Bourke a person might have to depend on the services of an attorney, and it would be a great hardship to prevent it.

Mr. BRODRIBB thought it would be a most dangerous thing to admit agents to practice in the courts in the interior.

Sir JOHN HAY presumed that if this clause were passed it would not alter matters in civil jurisdiction. It would only be a partial remedy for the disease, and on that ground they ought to hesitate before they brought in an alteration of the law such as this. He thought a question like that of whether attorneys should be admitted to the privileges of the bar was one that deserved discussion of itself, and it was desirable that they should have the question decided in a way other than by being tacked to an important bill like this, with which it had no necessary connection. If there were any necessity for this alteration it existed more in civil cases than in criminal cases. It was said that delays occurred in the procedure of their Courts, but if agents were permitted to appear they would become greater. He thought the question was brought in by a side wind, and that it should be dealt with separately, and not be prejudiced by connection with the bill.

Sir ALFRED STEPHEN thought that the question might be considered to be naturally connected with the bill.

Mr. A. CAMPBELL then said that as the House did not appear in a position to arrive at a decision with regard to the clause, and in view of the decision arrived at in another place, he begged to move that the Chairman leave the chair, report progress, and ask leave to sit again.

Mr. PIDDINGTON hoped that the hon. gentleman would not pursue such a course. If they sat to a pretty late hour they might pass the bill through committee, and there might be a chance of its being read the third time on Wednesday. He would be sorry to see it fall through now after it had been so long before them.

Mr. A. CAMPBELL said that the Government had determined not to proceed with any more business at present.

The Chairman left the chair, reported progress, and obtained leave to sit again.

The House adjourned at 21 minutes past 9 o'clock until 4 p.m. on Wednesday next.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, November 16.

The Speaker took the chair at half-past 4 o'clock.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

Dr. RENWICK said, in reply to Mr. Fletcher, that Mr. Fitzgerald, Deputy Surveyor General, had resigned his position as Chief Mining Surveyor. Mr. C. S. Wilkinson had been appointed to take charge temporarily of all mining surveys. No permanent appointment would be made until Parliament made provision for a Chief Mining Surveyor, subject solely to the control of the Department of Mines. The present temporary occupancy of the office of Chief Mining Surveyor was not under the control of the Surveyor General. It had been arranged that the mineral lands would be measured chiefly by staff mining surveyors, and when licensed surveyors were employed as mining surveyors the Surveyor General would doubtless, as heretofore, render all necessary advice and assistance. Documents relating to the resignation would be laid upon the table as soon as they could be prepared. The reason alleged for the resignation was undue interference by the Under-Secretary for Mines with the recognised duties of the late Chief Mining Surveyor. It was the intention of the Government to establish a separate staff of surveyors under the Chief Mining Surveyor to carry out the mining surveys of the colony.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said, in reply to Mr. Reid, that he would presently lay upon the table of the House 150 copies of the map known as the Exhibition Map, made up to 31st October, 1882. Further copies showing pastoral and electoral boundaries would be laid upon the table in a few days.

Mr. LACKEY said, in answer to Mr. Fraser, that with regard to the railway from the Clarence to the New England tableland connecting with the Great Northern Railway, the original trial survey plans having been destroyed by the Garden Palace fire, he was informed it would not be possible to have the re-surveys completed before the termination of the session. He could not yet state approximately the cost of construction per mile of a line from South Grafton to the neighbourhood of Glen Innes, and from Grafton to the neighbourhood of Tenterfield, respectively; or the cost per mile of constructing a line to connect either one or other of the above lines with the navigable waters of the Richmond River, together with the distance in each instance?

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. W. Clarke, said he was not in a position to say definitely whether or not it was the intention of the Government to cause a sum to be placed upon the Supplementary Estimates for 1883 for the purpose of increasing the salaries of mail guards, sorters, and letter carriers?

Mr. LACKEY said, in reply to Mr. Burns, who asked the question for Mr. Trickett, that the bill to deal with the South Head roads, was in the hands of the Parliamentary draughtsman, and would be submitted to the House as soon as practicable.

Mr. W. J. FOSTER said, in reply to Mr. Burns, who asked the question for Mr. Trickett, that the question of a site for the Eastern suburbs courthouse was now receiving consideration, and inquiries were being made on the subject; but there appeared to be some difficulty in finding a suitable position, and nothing could be done until this matter had been settled. He might mention that the Mayor of Woollahra had recommended the resumption of certain land adjoining the police station in Point Piper-road, and the Mayors of Waverley and Paddington concurred in the selection; but from official reports received by him on the subject, it did not appear that the establishment of a court at the place suggested would fairly accommodate the large population of Waverley and Paddington.

Mr. LACKEY said, in reply to Mr. Burns, who asked the question for Mr. Trickett, that 8800 tons of steel rails branded SJC, were imported for use on the Northern Railway extension from Tamworth; 13 rails were broken, and 929 defective ones had been reserved for use in sidings. The rails were supplied by Société John Cockerill, of Belgium, at £7 7s. a ton f.o.b. in London. Tenders were called for them, and Mr. John Fowler reported on them at 1 per cent. commission.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Burns, for Mr. Trickett, said that a waiting-room at Moore Park gates for tramway passengers had been asked for about 12 months ago, and if land suitable for the purpose could have been obtained it would have been erected. The City Corporation was in possession of the only site considered to be suitable, and that body had declined to allow it to be used for that purpose.

Dr. RENWICK, in reply to Mr. Levien, said that when the question of fencing the road between Borah Creek and Quirindi, which was under consideration by the Government, had been determined, the road could be formally opened.

Mr. LACKEY, in reply to Mr. Levien, said that an inquiry was being held as to the desirableness of having a platform and siding at the junction of the Armidale and Nundle roads, and a decision with regard to it would shortly be arrived at.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply to Mr. Joseph P. Abbott, said that a petition having reference to the claim of Mrs. Emma Louisa A'Beckett had not been presented to the Governor in Council.

Mr. WISDOM, in reply to Mr. Copeland, said that on the 31st October last, Edward Russell Daunt, who had been committed for trial on a charge of obtaining valuable securities (worth £300), was admitted to bail, himself in the sum of £80, and Herbert Edward Daunt in the sum of £80. The surety was of the same name as the accused, but he could not say whether he is a relative or not. The prisoner was not arraigned on the first day of the sitting of the Court, on the 6th November instant, as a bill against him was not found until the 7th instant. He might state, with regard to this case, that his first impression was that the accused had not committed a criminal offence; but the dishonesty of the affair was so apparent that he was determined the accused should not escape if it was possible to put him upon his trial, and he therefore made diligent search to ascertain whether there was any case in point, and finding none, thought it desirable to leave the doubt he had had in his mind to the decision of the Court rather than to determine it himself. The original information was drawn in the ordinary form, but as this was a very peculiar case, he thought it better to have a special information drawn, so that the case might not breakdown owing to the form of information. It was reported on the opening of the Court, on Monday, the 16th instant, that the defendant had absconded and left the colony, but nothing was said as to where he was supposed to have gone to, and it was therefore not thought necessary to call him upon his recognisance, or apply for a bench warrant until the closing of the sittings. Every effort had been made to arrest the absconder; and with the law as it stands, there was scarcely a part of the civilised world where he could not be apprehended, while the fact of his absconding would make the case stronger against himself.

PAPER.

Sir Henry Parkes laid on the table of the House a return relative to leave of absence to public officers.

It was ordered that the document be printed.

MORT'S BAY IMPROVEMENT BILL.

Mr. CAMERON moved,—"1. That the Mort's Bay Improvement Bill be referred to a select committee for consideration and report. 2. That such committee consist of Dr. Renwick, Mr. Garrard, Mr. Fletcher, Mr. Burns, Mr. Poole, Mr. Davies, Mr. O'Connor, Mr. Jacob, Mr. [illegible], and the mover."

The motion was agreed to.

THE LAND BILL.

Sir PATRICK JENNINGS, in resuming the debate on the motion for the second reading of the Crown Lands Bill, said that he had not the pleasure of being present when the Minister for Lands made his statement upon that question, nor had he the advantage of hearing in person the reply made by the leader of the Opposition. He had since gone through the utterances of those gentlemen as reported, and he took the view that they had put opposing policies before that House. It was not his intention to go back to either analyse or criticise the votes, conduct, or the proceedings of that House or of any of its members with regard to any evils of the land question, because he thought that the question was one which above all others from time to time might assume phases which would cause it to crop up for reconsideration. The policy which might be very good and suitable to the circumstances of the country 20 years ago might not be the best or the most suitable for the circumstances of the country at this day. He would therefore attach no importance to the fact that certain gentlemen may have at certain times announced opinions apparently inconsistent with their present utterances, nor was he prepared to endorse the extraordinary statements made by Mr. Garrett. He (Sir Patrick Jennings) assumed that the Colonial Secretary, as the Government as a whole, accepted the responsibility of the whole of the policy as put forward in that bill. He would go further with regard to a statement made by Mr. Garrett, to the effect that it would be better for them to form themselves into a nice little family to pass that bill than to quarrel over the debates of the bill. He thought that the spirit which ought to animate responsible government was a matter of such serious importance that it ought to be maintained above all things in this country. He would not take the position of asking the support of any party to any measure if it were to be passed at the expense of what ought to be the spirit of responsible government. With regard to the amendments of Mr. Garrett, they were told by that gentleman that he was going to wait to see if the Government would accept them. He (Sir Patrick Jennings) hoped that the Government would not accept them, or display to this country so much weakness as a Government the most powerful and the strongest we had ever had deliberately announcing a policy and then allowing it to be cut up there.

Sir HENRY PARKES: We know how to take care of ourselves.

Sir PATRICK JENNINGS said that they knew so well how to take care of themselves that sometimes outsiders knew something too. Certain statements were made last night—[Sir Henry Parkes: Not by us]—with regard to the Ministry which had gone so far uncontradicted, unchallenged, and not even an interjection made against them. Those statements had been made in such a way as to allow it to be assumed that they were in some degree palatable. In looking over the speech of the Minister for Lands he found that there were two or three things with which he could not altogether agree. These were there to criticise the policy of the land laws as put before them. In that Consolidation Act practically there was nothing new, because whatever new elements it might contain were not of sufficient importance to form a legitimate ground of objection for opposing the bill. Therefore they took the bill as a simpler and easier compilation of the law as it was and had been more or less during the last 21 years. He found that the Minister for Lands took credit for a great deal of the prosperity which had accrued to this colony since the inception of the land law, and compared the financial position of the country to-day with what it was at the time of the introduction of the land law, and attributed the growth of the colony to the operation of the land laws. He was not at all prepared to accept the proposition that the prosperity of the colony had necessarily been the result of that law. That proposition had not been proved to his satisfaction at all. He did not think there was any connection at all between the state of improvement shown with regard to the additions we had made to our stock and the land laws. He could fancy a state of things by which we might have as many sheep as what the Minister for Lands boasted of in his speech, and of a revenue quite as large, without parting with the land. He could fancy that a great many of the persons who had been placed under that law, would have preferred long leases rather than have to buy the land as they did at present. Now they were told that they had made great progress in material wealth and revenue, and the main illustration given of that advance was the large increase in the number of sheep. They were asked to look at the other colonies to see how little growth they had made compared with the great growth of this colony. Well, he did not think that it was a very easy thing to make an exact comparison between the circumstances of one colony of the Australian group and of another. They all developed circumstances of climate and facilities for production that would interfere with the value of any comparison. The Minister for Lands had stated that we had increased our sheep in a much greater ratio than Victoria. Well, he found that they had as many sheep according to the territory as this colony had. They had also increased in growing grain, not alone to supply themselves but to be exporters of wheat. We were told that we had progressed in a much greater ratio than South Australia had, but we were not told that South Australia had for many years been employed in exporting large quantities of wheat to the European markets. They knew very well that there was one particular circumstance which had done more than anything else to develop the wealth of this colony with regard to the production of wool and the utilisation of country, and that was the introduction of fencing, the subdivision of runs, and the making of water reservoirs. That was the natural outcome of settlement and growth of country, and what he—without being unduly critical—maintained was that the enterprise of the people would have done that almost under any conceivable form of law that could have been passed in that Legislature. [Sir John Robertson: They never did it.] It was to their energy and enterprise that the great interest in the rent was due. It was possible to have avoided the great evils that had arisen from free selection before survey, and to have had the whole of those results as well. Inasmuch as the bill contained that objectionable system of free selection before survey, he was compelled to vote against it. The system of free selection before survey was, in his mind, the great blot in the law. There were three principal indictments against the law made by both parties in the House, made by the friends of the free selectors, made by those who are assumed to speak in the name of the public, and made in the name of the pastoral tenants. If he were asked how it was that those principal objections thrust themselves forward in every stage, how it was that they were the endless theme of articles in the press, the well worn subjects on public platforms, his answer would be that the crowning evil was free selection before survey. However, it might have been a good thing to introduce such a system to meet what he knew himself was at the time a desperate state of affairs, but it having served its time, should they not reconsider the position and ask whether it was necessary to continue this sort of thing? The greatest praise had been bestowed on the hon. the Minister for Lands; everyone had spoken well of his intention, and he (Sir Patrick Jennings) would not add any indiscriminate adulation, but thought all agreed that Sir John Robertson, in his undertaking in regard to the law, had done well to the colony. But in a country like this, where time wrought great changes of circumstance, he thought the hon. gentleman should be the last to refuse to admit how far the principles of his bill—he having gained some 21 years of experience since it became law—ought not to be reconsidered. The principal objections to the law, as put forward, had, to his mind, narrowed themselves down to three. They were always told that the squatters did not contribute their fair proportion to the revenue of the State; that the taxation of the country could be lightened if the rent of their leases was increased; but, on the other hand, they were told that if they had a secure tenure of their leasehold, with regard to its area, a large rent could be demanded; that was, if the leases were made what leases ought to be—definite areas held for a definite term, and not shifting areas, which might be one thing to-day and another thing to-morrow. Were they such, he conceived there was not a pastoral tenant but would pay a highly increased rental for them. His deliberate opinion was, that if the squatters were accused of paying too small a rental it was because they had not a secure tenure of their runs. They were told that the land law had led to strife, disappointment, law suits, and all sorts of evil consequences. This was due, he maintained, to free selection before survey. Now, if men were to act fairly towards one another he had no doubt that the whole of the bona-fide selections in the country would not injure the pastoral tenant, but when it was found possible to take up land with the object of selling it, and making a profit from it, a new trade arose, and the pastoral tenant found that he must in self-defence become the purchaser. Such a system had not, he thought, been intended in the conception of the Act, but it unhappily had resulted from it. In the United States of America and in Canada men were allowed to take up land with the view of giving each a start in life from the patrimony of the whole, but they were never allowed to select a second time. Once a man had selected he had his share in the common heritage, and he could not sell that share and select another. This, he thought, was the true principle. If they said to the people of this country, "Go out on the land, cultivate it and reside on it, but you must not sell it and take up another piece of land," he thought they would get rid of a great deal of difficulty with regard to taking up selections one after another. They knew men who had made a trade of it, taking up selections one after another, going first to one run then to another, and compelling the owners to buy them out. The law that allowed such a thing to be was surely not one which should not be amended. Men should be compelled to reside on their selections, and if they sold them they should not be allowed to select again. Had this been the law they would have found that the enormous number of selections which had been taken up and sold again would not have been. Therefore he found the three objections formulated from different sections to be—first, that the people of the country complained sufficient revenue was not derived from the lands in the shape of rents; another, that the selectors of the country complained they were put in conflict against the previous holders, who looked upon them as intruders; a third, that the working of the system led to contention and strife among the different classes of people. Although it might seem somewhat sentimental to say so, he thought a public feeling raised against one body of men was a very serious thing. He did not think that any legislation in a country should be so framed as to cause any of the citizens of that country to be looked upon as monopolists, or to be placed in an invidious position with regard to the rest of the community. Well, then, if they found that these three great causes of complaint existed in regard to the present law, what were they to do but to search out a way to get out of the difficulty? He was aware that it was a very serious question when the vested interests that had grown up were considered. He was also perfectly aware that to carry out legislation practically on the lines laid down in the nine propositions of Mr. Stuart, or on the amendments of Mr. Garrett, would be a most ungrateful thing, but he did not know in what way they should separate the two contending interests with regard to the holding of land, unless the Crown took a portion of the pastoral land, out of which leases would be thrown open for selection to all those who desired to take them up. They were in a very extraordinary position, having, as it were, three land bills before them. Under ordinary circumstances when the Government brought down a bill it was quite sufficient for any Opposition to vote against it, but they were not bound to supply a policy. If others followed the example of the leader of the Opposition and the hon. member for Camden, they would soon have several bills before them, and there might prove to be some truth in the theory that this would be an interminable discussion. He preferred to limit his remarks to the principal objections brought forward by the leader of the Opposition against the Government. He found that in the platform of the hon. member for Illawarra there were nine planks. But it would not be for him to criticise amendments, which they ought to be sure would never be entertained by the hon. gentlemen, who believed in the policy of the bill as it stood. He charged against indiscriminate selection before survey the insufficient rental from the pastoral lands, the insufficient, unsuitable tenure of the runs, and all the difficulties which had arisen between the two classes of occupants of the Crown lands. It now appeared as if the squatters and free selectors had tired themselves out in a fight in which both had got the worst of it—having, like the Kilkenny cats, each devoured the other. Now they came before the Government, saying, "Give us something that will be certain. Rid us of this warfare, and we will pay a fair rent for that which you will give us; but do not let the present thing go on, rendering life intolerable to both classes." (Hear, hear.) No question had been raised, so far as he could see, with regard to deferred payments, but he had heard demands made with regard to these payments. His sentiments on that subject were well known, and he would not compromise the difficulties of land reform by doing anything that would cause the remission of interest to be considered as a plank in any platform. Taking the position that he had with regard to free selection before survey, it was obvious that if those disputes were to end, the State should get a return from the pastoral tenants for the enjoyment of secure tenure, or "fixity of tenure." He did not exactly understand what was meant by the latter term in this colony, for in Ireland, where it was first adopted, it meant that a tenant should not be evicted so long as he paid a fair rent. In the proposition put forward by the leader of the Opposition, in regard to giving fixed leases for certain portions of the land held by a pastoral tenant, he did not notice any provision in reference to improvements. If any such provision was adopted, the improvements effected on the land should belong to the man who made them. With regard to auction sales it was impossible that the system which had continued for so many years could have been carried on if it had not been for auction sales. They afforded a mitigation of the difficulties caused by free selection before survey. The whole pastoral properties would have been destroyed if it had not been possible for the pastoral tenants to have secured land at auction sales. It prevented the pastoral tenants being driven into wholesale dummying and similar expedients. But men having long leases would not be under the necessity of buying land. [Sir John Robertson: Hear, hear.] The majority of men who had acquired large areas of land had bought the land compulsorily. (Hear, hear.) He knew very well that the abolition of this extensive selling of land was one of the problems that would have to be faced by any body of men who succeeded in defeating the present Government. The two or three millions a year at present received from the lands would have to be more or less provided for by some other means, and the Government would not be in the position to command that popularity which wealth conferred not alone on individuals but on Governments. (Hear, hear.) They would not be able to be in the position of the present Minister for Public Works to distribute so lavishly assistance to the local wants of the districts. Therefore, in the event of the leader of the Opposition succeeding in carrying his policy into effect, he would deserve all the success he might gain in the face of the diminished revenue that would inevitably arise. However, it would be better not to have a good revenue than not to have a land law based on what they conceived to be right and justice. Whatever befel this bill there was one thing evident, and that was that the leader of the Opposition and the Minister in charge of the bill appeared to be unanimous in consigning the pre-emptive leaseholders to an untimely grave. These pre-emptive leaseholders never seemed to be quite in favour. The Minister for Lands when he first passed his Land Bill allowed the preleases rather as an excrescence. That part of the bill had been kicked about as a stupid child that had never gained the affection of the author of the bill, who had accepted that portion from the other Chamber. [Sir John Robertson: No, from the orders in Council.] Well, it was a relic of antiquity, and it never seemed to gain much of the hon. gentleman's affection. He (Sir Patrick Jennings) thought, however, that the preleases had done a great deal of good. At least they had been paying the highest rentals; taking the average for the last 21 years, they had never paid less than £2 per section. In respect to this matter he was quite as averse to the proposal of the leader of the Opposition as he was to the proposals of the Government, and he believed that unless they could get that proper consideration persons who had a vested right in these pre-leases would be suffering an injustice. [Sir John Robertson: We have not disturbed them.] The hon. gentleman in his speech did not, at all events, show much kindly consideration towards the pre-leaseholders. There were one or two other proposals to which he desired to briefly refer, namely, having certain areas in which people might be associated with all the advantages of close neighbourhood. He was quite sure that if the experiment was tried, as in Queensland, of having homestead areas set apart, or as in the United States and Canada, where people could get those lands at a very low price on condition that they should not alienate them working men, carriers, and artisans might have small homes for themselves, and the country would greatly gain. Such men might take up 160 or 320 acres on 10 or 15 years' payments, on a surveyed area, and form a very useful class of settlers. He thought they ought to have some such provision as that embodied in the new legislation, so that they might have areas of settlement outside the small country towns, within which areas these settlers would be comparatively near each other, where they would have opportunities for giving their children education, and where they and their families would have the benefits of civilisation. He had known numerous instances in which settlers doing well in the interior had given up their settlements because they wanted to let their children get some kind of education, and know something of civilisation. If these small homestead areas were created around these small country towns there would be fresh settlement, and each small town would form the nucleus of a settlement area of a very valuable character. That was not apparently part of any of the amendments or the propositions in the proposed bill; but he thought that no legislation would be satisfactory to the great bulk of the people of the present day that would not embody such a proposition as that, that would not embody some sort of security of tenure to the pastoral tenant, and that would not include in its contents a provision which would secure to any person taking up land an immunity from going to law. He had always considered that the Crown had clearly failed here in its duty by not placing the people on the land, and by not taking the responsibility of doing so. They simply put the people on the land, and said, "There you are, and you must fight it out." The proposition of the hon. member, Mr. Stuart, in favour of local boards was a good one, but really the most important duty that ought to be given to these local boards was to decide upon the applications of persons when they were made, and once made and authenticated by the local boards, there should be no question in regard to the holdings. It was the duty of a person putting himself in the position of a landlord, as the Crown was here, to be able in the first instance to authorise people to occupy the land, and he thought they were neglecting their duty in not providing some means by which the people could do so. He thought local boards would be good means for looking through all the applications, and giving the applicants authority to take up land, and then these people should not be disturbed, and no further complications should arise in regard to them. If, then, they could give the free selector his land without harassing him, and if they could ascertain by local boards who was the bona-fide applicant, and could put him on the land in a secure way, then he would look upon these local boards as a very desirable addition to the Act. He had already mentioned two benefits that would accrue from the propositions he laid down, and the third was that they would have largely increased rentals from the holders of Crown lands, and it would give through the whole country an impetus to pastoral enterprise which would more than recompense the Government for any trouble they had been put to in undertaking such a task. These considerations had occurred to his mind, and he had put them before the House as his reasons for not voting for the second reading of the bill, but if any measure were brought forward embodying these propositions, he should be happy to accept it. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. LACKEY said he hoped in the course of the few observations he felt called upon to make to the House on the question now occupying the attention of hon. members, he should be able to follow the example set by the principal speakers who had gone before him, and while dealing with the main questions embodied in the bill introduced by his hon. colleague, that he should be able to steer clear of the personalities which so frequently intruded themselves in debates of this character. The question was one of considerable importance, and in itself opened up quite sufficient matter to engross the attention of hon. members without introducing in any way extraneous or undesirable subjects. The question of the alteration of the land law of this colony had occupied the attention of our principal legislators here for a great number of years. They had had from time to time different amendments suggested in our land laws, and they had had different hon. members coming forward at various times, submitting to the House and the country new means by which the land laws of the country could be made to operate more beneficially and more successfully as far as the interests of the whole population were concerned. But up to the present time none of these hon. members had succeeded since the land law of 1861 was passed in submitting a land law which would meet the concurrence of the House or the community outside. In dealing with the question of the amendment of the land law of 1861, which was now introduced by his hon. friend Sir John Robertson, they were placed in a position different from that in which they had been placed on any other occasion before, from the fact that they were not alone asked to consider the amending bill of his hon. colleague, but in addition there were two other land laws submitted for their consideration. (Hear, hear.) Under these circumstances hon. members ought to consider themselves very favourably dealt with. The alternative was given to them of taking the land law of his hon. colleague, or of taking that pointed out by the hon. member for Illawarra, and if they were not satisfied with either, they could take the proposition of the hon. member, Mr. Garrett. It might be thought that in an amalgamation of these three land laws they might find something to satisfy hon. members and the country. He, at all events, felt satisfied that the principles contained in the bill introduced by his hon. friend (Sir John Robertson) would be adhered to as far as those principles were concerned, and if hon. members thought there was any collusion between the Government and any hon. members with regard to the question, they were lamentably mistaken. (Hear, hear.) He felt he might answer freely for his colleague that success on this question would give a very poor recompense to him if he compromised his position as a law reformer by descending to any such objectionable means as that. In reference to the law they were now called upon to consider, many hon. members would recollect, in dealing with the land laws of this colony, the difficulties that had existed from the very commencement in the operation of those land laws. He knew there were several members of that House who recollected the difficulties that people had to contend with who were anxious to become possessors of the soil before the land law of 1861 was passed by his hon. friend. At that time the land law of the country necessitated a course being resorted to which had been pointed to by hon. members of the Opposition as that of not surveying before selection, and it was well known that under that system the state of the country had come to such a deadlock that the people from one end of the country to the other revolted against such a state of things existing any longer. (Hear, hear.) It became necessary that the people of the country should have more access to the land, for the hope held out to them at that time that they could get access to the land was simply illusory, and those who desired to avail themselves of the advantages of the land could not do so. It was in the face of these difficulties that his hon. friend conceived a law, the spirit of which had operated so successfully from that time up to the present. Before he proceeded to deal with the experience of the land law of 1881, perhaps it would be just as well to make allusion to this matter of pre-leases, which had been so prominently pointed out by the hon. member opposite in the course of his address. And he would recollect when he took the Secretary for Lands to task on this subject that this matter was handed down to the hon. gentleman and the House under the land legislation of the country which existed long before this. In the early days of the colony they had three different principles under which land was sold. It was sold at 5s., 12s., and eventually at £1; and it would be recollected that the large quantities of land purchased at 5s. an acre were converted into large estates, many of which now existed in various parts of the country, and accompanied with that land were large pre-emptive leases attached to the estates. [Sir John Robertson: Hear, hear.] That system of pre-leases came down from that time to the time when the land law was brought down by his hon. friend. But not only under the system of pre-leases had the land been attached. At the prices to which he had referred large quantities of land were purchased at auction by pastoral tenants in different parts of the country, and large areas of pre-leased land. No doubt they had to pay rental for them; but hon. members would see that the system had grown up from the early days of the country to the present time, and was not interfered with in the measure introduced now. Hon. members, from different points of view, had taken great pains to point out the injurious effects of the land law of 1861, and the great amount of dummyism and black mail; but did hon. members imagine for one moment that these objectionable practices were confined to the land law of New South Wales? [Sir John Robertson: Hear, hear.] The same objectionable practices notoriously existed in Victoria; and even in Queensland, which was pointed to as a paragon of all that was right and proper in land legislation, large estates were being taken up continuously. Introduce what measure, and pass what law they liked, and surround it with what precautions they might, he felt confident that the desire to acquire land would become potent in overcoming all restrictions they might put upon it. It was of course the duty of hon. members as trustees of the public and the public estate, to exercise all the power and experience they possessed in endeavouring to frame such a law as would do justice to the great bulk of the community, and to the free-selector on the one hand and the pastoral tenant on the other. Now the hon. member who had just sat down had made allusion to the fact that the squatter would be in a better position to pay a higher rent for the public lands of the colony if he had fixity of tenure, than he could now afford to do. Well, he thought that must be admitted on all hands; but the hon. member would recollect that for very many years in the history of the land legislation in this colony the pastoral tenants had their leases for 10 years, while they were now paying a great deal more without fixity of tenure. Therefore, notwithstanding the large quantity of land taken up by the agricultural selector the country had derived a larger amount of revenue from the occupation of the land by the squatter than it did when the land was held under fixity of tenure. Hon. members would recollect that in dealing with this law, and in regard to the law passed in 1861, though it had been spoken of very disparagingly, he contended that justice had not been done to it by the different speakers who had overlooked the good results which had been derived by the colony from the operation of the law. It only required for a short time the attention of hon. members who were acquainted with the history and the circumstances of the colony to show that this was the case. The leader of the Opposition had alluded to the fact that very few parts of the colony were like the district represented by Mr. Garvan, and said that such districts were scarce, few, and far between, and the inference was that Eden was the only district which showed successful results. (Hear, hear.) He thought, however, it would not be necessary to travel far to show the contrary. There were many hon. members who had travelled over many parts of the country, as he had done, and would know that what he was about to say was true. Let them take in the first instance the district already alluded to—that of Twofold Bay. It would be recollected by many hon. members that the whole of this country, comprising one of the finest tracts in New South Wales, was occupied as one cattle station. (Hear, hear.) It was occupied by the Messrs. Finlay, and he supposed the profits of that station did not reach more than £400 or £500 a year, for he believed their operations were not a financial success. But what was the result of the operation of this land law, which had been condemned in such unlimited terms? Was there any part of this country showing so many happy and prosperous homesteads as Twofold Bay? And the operations of those farmers were not confined to cattle and sheep rearing. They farm, grow crops, produce cheese, butter, and other necessaries of life, and give occupation to a large number of people, and are beneficial to the whole of the community. Then, again, there was the district around Kiama. He did not take Kiama itself as an illustration of the land laws, because large grants of land existed there before the operation of the law. But there was a large extent of country all around it which was nothing but waste land at the time, but which was now in profitable cultivation, with large numbers of families settled upon it. Those remarks applied to Gerringong, and they applied to Shoalhaven. (Hear, hear.) In the old days all those districts were comprised in one or two grants; but what was the case now? He was down there the other day to open a bridge at Nowra, and he saw there a large population, happy-looking and well dressed, and he thought that was a satisfactory evidence of the operation of this law. (Hear, hear.) It was not now occupied only by one or two families engaged in unprofitable pursuits, but it was occupied by an industrious and thriving population, doing good, not for themselves alone, but for the whole of the community. (Hear, hear.) Then let them go to the Upper Hunter. They knew that in that district very large grants had been given to influential colonists, who in many cases came here with very little capital. There were large quantities of land there which used to be utterly waste, but which had now been brought into profitable settlement as soon as this law was passed. In the neighbourhood of Cassilis, the Goulburn River, and Merriwa, large numbers were now doing well. A deputation waited upon him the other day to urge upon the Government the necessity for the construction of a light line of railway from Scone to Merriwa and Cassilis. They stated very candidly the grounds upon which they urged this—the large and successful agricultural operations going on there. They instanced the wheat-producing qualities of the district, and produced statistics which showed how successfully the wheat-growing industry was carried on. One of the speakers stated that the average yield of wheat in his neighbourhood was 37 bushels to the acre. He thought that was an evidence of the successful operation of the land law he was referring to. He need hardly remind hon. members, in the presence of Mr. Murray, of the fertile character of the land in the neighbourhood of Inverell. (Hear, hear.) That district gave occupation to a large number of persons under this law. They were largely occupied in growing wheat, and it was regarded as one of the richest and most productive portions of the colony. He held that the success with which these lands had been cultivated, and the large number of persons settled there, were evidences of some of the good effected by this land law. He would go a little further, and look at the rivers on the northern coast—the Macleay, the Manning, and the Hastings. He was sure no hon. member would venture to say a word against those districts in the presence of the hon. member who represented those parts of the country. (Hear, hear.) They had ample evidence in the large numbers of persons who lived upon those rivers, and in the many boats engaged in carrying to Sydney the produce of those districts, and in taking back the stores and necessary requirements of the people—ample evidence of the success of the land law. He knew of one of those agricultural districts, brought into existence by the Act of 1861, and which had been referred to by Mr. Garrett. That was a most remarkable country. It was land at an elevation of some 4000 feet, and it was one of the most prolific pieces of country in New South Wales. At the time when the first attempt was made to bring it under cultivation it was nothing else but a dense tropical scrub. It had to be cleared by falling belts of it at a time. Then they waited for the first hot season, and put a fire through the whole of this brush. After a shower of rain came they sowed perennial rye grass, and got a permanent crop of grass. People who showed their enterprise by reclaiming land in this spirit deserved well of the country—(hear, hear)—and they deserved the reward they got. (Hear, hear.) This land which these selectors had taken up, and gone on working at, had gone on increasing in value, and was now worth three or four and twenty pounds an acre. (Hear, hear.) No right-minded person in the community would begrudge those people their reward. (Hear, hear.) That was another evidence of the success of the Land Law of 1861. He might go through Teralga, Queanbeyan, Crookwell, Cooma, Bombala, Kiandra, Tumberumba, and the Tumut—a large wheat-producing country now, but which only fed a few cattle before. These were triumphant proofs of the success of the Land Law, which had been so abused by some hon. members. But the successful operation of this law was not confined to those districts alone. There was land being taken up on the Richmond with an enterprise that deserved the greatest success. No one would deny those persons the reward of their enterprise. He might go on to make allusion to other districts which bore undeniable evidence of the success of the land law, but he thought the instances he had given, so far as agricultural operations and grazing were concerned, were sufficient to show that the law had been attended with a large amount of success. Hon. members had pointed out the great hardships under which the pastoral tenants had existed, and the difficulties they had had to contend with in fighting the free selector and in overcoming the impediments which the land law had placed in their way. Sir Patrick Jennings had likened these struggles to the Kilkenny cats. If that illustration was correct, that hon. member was certainly not an evidence of the effects of it. (Hear, hear.) The hon. member showed ample evidence of the success with which he had carried the war on—he was not one who had suffered. (Laughter.) He thought the colony had never been in such a prosperous state as it had been in since the passing of the land law, and as it was now. (Hear, hear.) He recollected when the fleeces of this colony were selling in the English market at 9d. and 10d. a lb.—not in the grease, but scoured wool. He recollected when fat cattle could be bought for about £2 10s., and sheep for 2s. 6d. to 3s. Now you could get £10 a head for fat cattle, and for fat wethers 14s. or 15s. [An Hon. Member: That is because they are scarce.] He did not think that was the reason: it was because the people on the one side had the money, and the people on the other had the supply. But it was, he contended, an evidence that squatting was in a more satisfactory state than it was in before the passing of this land law. Speaking of the prosperity of the country generally, he might refer to a statement of Sir John Robertson in alluding to the quantity of wool exported during the last few years, and comparing the exports of the present with the exports of the previous period. He found that the number of sheep we had in 1881 was thirty-six and a-half millions, as against only five and a-half millions for 1861. That was an evidence of the increasing wealth of the colony at all events. That was an evidence that that pursuit which had been referred to as one of the leading occupations of the colony was not in the depressed and paralysed state some hon. members had represented. He found that our wool exports in 1881 was no less than £7,149,789. He thought that that was also an evidence that the pastoral occupation had not suffered so largely by means of the land law, as had been stated in some quarters. Well, they found that the land revenue of 1857, three or four years before the passing of the land law of 1861, was was £118,000, whilst the land revenue of 1871 was £755,500, with the prospect of it increasing. Those were evidences in support of the statement that the pastoral industry of the colony had not suffered as it was desired people should be led to suppose. Well, he thought they might adduce further evidence of the good effects of the land laws of his hon. friend. From time to time the colony had had large accessions of pastoralists, agriculturists, and vignerons from the neighbouring colonies. They knew that large numbers of the agriculturists occupying the lands of this colony came from the adjoining colonies. Almost nine-tenths of the pastoral lands of the north-west and western parts of this country were occupied by people from the neighbouring colony. It certainly showed that the land laws had not operated against the profitable following of those industries. There was no doubt that during the last few years a large quantity of land had been sold which had become the property of private persons, and the colony had received a large income from the sale of those lands. So long as the money derived in that way was expended judiciously in public works—as it was now—and improvements, in the construction of railways, in providing telegraph communication, and in erecting public buildings, bridges, and roads, the public had no cause to complain of the quantity of land which had been sold, and had brought about those results. He had no sympathy with large companies holding immense areas of land, but he did say that it was an evidence of a wholesome character when they found persons engaged in various occupations investing their savings in purchasing land to a reasonable extent. He said that that was an evidence in favour of the accumulation of freehold, although he did not for one moment hold that it was for the advantage of the community to have the immense estates which had been bought in different parts of the colony. The prosperous working of our land law—the sale of lands—had enabled us to occupy a position in the English money market which was by no means unsatisfactory. The colony was now in such a position that persons were anxious to lend money to it at a much lower rate than they would to other persons. The interest we had to pay for our debentures in 1857 was £5 7s. 11d. per cent., while in 1882 we had to pay £3 18s. 3d. only. That was a striking illustration of the successful husbandry of the resources we had at our command. So long as the colony was engaged in the provident and judicious expenditure of these moneys in the various public works which were being engaged in, so long would our securities find a sale in the home market. Besides that, we were making railways in different parts of the colony, and were bridging over a large area which had hitherto been estranged from the metropolitan districts of Sydney. That brought him to the want of grounds for the statements made by Messrs. Stuart and Garrett in favour of making an arbitrary line between one country and the other, because there was a great difference in the condition of things now. Instead of such countries as the district of the Bogan being unknown to the people of the colony, they had railways running into the heart of the district, and the railway was being extended. He hoped that in a short time the metropolis would be in daily communication with the distant town of Bourke. Having succeeded in penetrating those distant districts, the same reasons did not exist for making those specific lines between one part of the country and another as formerly existed. Hon. members had made allusion to the great irregularities which had grown up between the selectors and the squatters in the practice which the selectors had observed of taking up land for settlement. Well, no doubt it was contemplated that that should be carried on in the wholesale way it had been when the present measure became the law of the land. There was no man in this community from whose mind a practice of that sort was further than it was from that of his honorable friend. The practice had increased, and it was necessary to provide a remedy that would prevent the continuance of it. A remedy had been provided which he thought would bring about that result, and he thought that the Colonial Secretary, instead of having the opposition and condemnation of hon. members opposite, should have their support. It was not his intention to refer at any length to the reasons which had influenced hon. members in submitting amendments which had been brought forward during that debate. It was a very unusual course to adopt, and one which he hardly recollected to have followed the discussion of any large [illegible] submit his amendments, he hoped that the House would pause, and pause very seriously, before it gave its concurrence to any such alterations as those contained in those amendments. The colony had had up to the present time a land law which, if it was thoroughly satisfactory, had produced a large amount of good—had brought about valuable results. During the operation of that law pastoral occupation had grown to a state of prosperity which had never existed before. If the present bill were adopted, it would result in a large amount of permanent good.

Mr. M'ELHONE said he wished he could approach that question as calmly and coolly as his hon. friend had done. To begin he had no hesitation in saying that it was his intention to vote against the bill. (Opposition cheers.) He would go further than that by saying that he would oppose any Government whose policy embraced free selection before survey, leaving the selector and the squatter to fight their battle out. In 1877 the Colonial Secretary delivered a speech in the Temperance Hall, but that speech showed that he really knew nothing at all about the question. The hon. gentleman enunciated the same opinion in 1877 that he did in 1861, by referring to his amendment in 1861. The effect of such amendment was that after the selector had done his three years on the land he would only have paid 5s., and he would be relieved from paying the balance of 15s. The whole of the estate, which belonged to the people, would have gone hopelessly into large companies and banking corporations. The Treasurer had enunciated the principle of dividing the squatter from the free-selector. Dr. Renwick was also in favour of dividing the two, and on November 16, 1880, when he was a candidate for East Sydney, made a speech and stated that he believed the time had come when they should divide the country into agricultural and pastoral areas. They had three members of the Government who wanted fixity of tenure. The Colonial Secretary had denounced the Act, and had pictured the discord which had arisen from it; and that, instead of increasing the agricultural produce, it had decreased it. The Colonial Treasurer had denounced this system. Instead of deriving from it two or three hundred thousand pounds per annum, as they were now doing, they might have got two millions a year. He had helped to get votes for Sir John Robertson, and thought at the time he was doing a right thing in supporting him, because when the Act was put in force the land was a monopoly in the hands of a few, but things had altered since then. At the time that Act was passed all the back country was unknown and unstocked, inhabited only by a few blackfellows. But on that territory were now ten millions or fifteen millions of sheep. A number of persons had taken up these blocks, and many of them were now stocked and had been made valuable. Men with their own money, and money that they had borrowed, stocked the land and improved it, and were now drawing splendid incomes from it, and in spite of the land law the squatters had gone on improving it. Where 15 or 20 years ago the land was a desert they had gone and changed it, in the face of the land law. He had been told that the bill before the House would not be made a party question, but he had never seen the land question anything but a party question, and he believed it would continue to be a party question till all the public estate was gone. He referred to a formal resolution he had moved in March, 1879, in the House, with regard to dividing the squatters' leases from the selectors' leases. He contended that there were portions of the colony entirely unfit for selection blocks, and the selector who went there went to his own ruin. Such lands should be given to squatters on lease for say 21 years, paying a good rental, but they should not be permitted to buy it out. It was a bad law which allowed a man to take up land in one district one day and permitted him to sell out and take up another block elsewhere. Let the selector have his little bit of land free from the squatter, but they should also encourage the men who were clearing the wilderness, where, if the selector went, were he not bought out by the squatter he would be starved out. In South Australia these lessees were compensated for the value of their improvements according to a graduated system, and the lessees had some degree of security. Was not that a better way to settle this question than to have this internal war of two classes. (Hear, hear.) He believed that the proper system would be to draw a line across some portion of the colony and give the Crown lessees a fixed tenure of the land outside that line. He was anxious to see something done to let both the squatters and selectors occupy the land in peace. Let them do as they did in South Australia, and they would not only get a fair rental from the squatters, but all classes of settlers would be more contented. Nothing could be fairer than the offer to give a higher rental if a surer tenure could be given. A great deal had been said about the fortunes that had been made from the purchase of land; but he would like to know where those fortunes were. The land had been bought up, not by wealthy settlers, but by English capital. (Hear, hear.) He would never vote for this or any other land bill which left the colony open to indiscriminate free selection and perpetuated the present discord between the two classes. (Hear, hear.) The Minister for Mines had told them about the prosperity of Eden, Kiama, and Gerringong districts; but why? Simply because the selectors had the land to make the best use of, and did not have to fight the squatters. Why had free selection been so great in most of the northern districts? Because the selector did not have to fight the Crown tenants at every step. (Hear, hear.) Where the two classes were thrown into conflict perpetual disputes and disaster for one or the other was sure to be the result. Would any man tell him that he had a valuable pastoral property, and would not fight the free selectors tooth and nail, in order to preserve that property? If he did, he would tell him he was a liar. It was against human nature not to fight for the possession of the land. It was true that the land law had done some good, but for one iota of good it had done it had inflicted a thousand evils upon the country by the ill-feeling, the perjury, and the ignorance of the children, all which had been the inevitable consequence of the inquitous land law. (Hear, hear.) Go where you might in the country, you found that there was an almost perpetual war between the squatters and the selectors, and in nine cases out of ten the free selectors had to give way. The member for West Sydney spoke of Mr. Conroy as a scoundrel. He was a more liberal and a richer man than the family who spoke of him. He took up land at Warrabeen and sold out, probably at a profit, after which he took up 10 or 11 blocks on a station of his (Mr. M'Elhone's) father-in-law, the late Mr. John Brown, and was bought out for £11,000. He then selected on the run of the son-in-law of the Minister for Lands, and after three years, being bought out again, went on the run of Mr. Richards. The Richards family tried to block him in, but Conroy had money, pluck, and a large family, and he managed to block the other people in. The law which allowed such contests as these was an accursed one, and in years to come would cause the names of Sir John Robertson and his followers to be detested. (Cheers.) What did hon. members see when they went to Albury but the land all gone, and the people gone with it? Cross Liverpool Plains, and on the line to Boggabri they would see not a single living soul, and the same thing had occurred on the fertile lands around Tamworth. The money received for the sale of these lands was a curse to the country, and we had better never have had it. We had heard a great deal about the Pockataroo cases, and the Minister for Lands said he had cancelled the leases. But the Minister had no power to do this, and if Mr. Walsh and his partners would only let him have the land he would fight the Government over it, and beat them. Mr. Walsh had paid a great deal for the run, and had been so rushed by dummies that he had been compelled to act on the defensive, when he found he had lost 50,000 acres of land by means of people who only took it up to make money out of it. These dummy selectors used the blackmail they extorted from one squatter to enable them to blackmail another, and this was the sort of thing Sir John Robertson wished to perpetuate. Nothing had done so much to demoralise and corrupt the House and the country as this Government had, because anyone who supported them could get roads and bridges. The sooner they were sent to the country the better. (Cheers.) He was not afraid, because he would not come back here. He had wasted his time, ruined his constitution, and made many enemies for nothing while he had been here. The hon. gentleman had told them about the increase in sheep under his Act. That increase was solely caused by the opening up and occupation of country west of the Darling. They called these men wealthy, but the banks and loan companies knew whether they were wealthy or not. (Hear, hear.) And if they liked to close the mortgages, many a man would be ruined in the colony, and instead of the land being worth 30s. a head it would be found to be worth only 5s. a head. Yet they were told that these men made their fortunes and went away from the colony to spend it. (Hear, hear.) They were told that this was a law to promote the interests of the country. It was a law which encouraged false swearing, both on the side of the squatter and free selector, and for one iota of good it had done to the country it had done a thousand times more harm. He was stating what he knew from his actual knowledge. The Minister for Lands no doubt thought it to be his duty to paint the state of the country in glowing colours; but he had shown that there was nothing but ruin, ill-will, and evil throughout the colony, arising from this accursed land law; and he asked whether hon. members would tolerate it any longer. When the hon. member for Camden was Minister for Lands he appointed men to administer the law, who by their false swearing had ruined many a poor selector. Under this law the squatter persecuted the selector, and the selector fought the squatter; and in nine cases out of ten the squatter got the land. He mentioned one case in which a man named Wallace selected 100 acres of land on the Bando run, of which the Messrs. White were the lessees, and they tried to ruin him. What could justify a law which enabled rich squatters, worth half a million of money, to forswear themselves, in order to keep a selector out of 100 acres of land? There was another case, that of the poor man Dougharty, also on the land of Mr. White, and who was persecuted and ruined. Need he say anything more to justify the strong language he had used that night. The only remedy was to give the squatters a long tenure, make them pay more for the land, and take away the right of purchasing by virtue of improvements. (Hear, hear.) Now was the time to put a stop to these evils, and see that justice was done between man and man. (Hear, hear.) If this Government would not do it another Government would. (Hear, hear.) Draw the line somewhere. Let the selector select on one side of the line, and give the squatters security of tenure on the other side. They had now the chance they had never had before, and let them sweep this strong Government into oblivion with this unrighteous land law. What he denounced was the injustice and wrongdoing that had been done under this accursed law. He did not want to see a revolution here, nor did he desire to see such a state of things as exists in Ireland, and because he did not want to see this, he wanted to see this accursed law swept away once and for ever. Give the squatter a right to the saltbush country, which was useless to the selector, but let the selector take up land that he could cul- [illegible] selectors had been quiet so long, and that they had not taken pistol in hand and swept the oppressors away like dogs. He would have done it long ago if he had been a selector. He did not care who it was, but let them have a Government that would amend the law in the spirit of the hon. member, Mr. Stuart. He hoped every hon. member would give an honest vote upon this question. If he had spoken too strongly, he apologised, but he spoke strongly because he felt strongly upon this question. He thought the time had come when they might adopt the American land law, and increase the area of selections; but if a man once sold out, he should never be allowed to select again. He was willing also to lower the price to the bona-fide selector, but he would be no party to a re-enactment of the present law, for it had not done what it was expected to do. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. HUNGERFORD, in explanation, said that he desired to give a direct contradiction to what the hon. member had said about him. He had no doubt the hon. member believed what he had said, but he had an unfortunate peculiarity of being gulled by any person. With reference to M'Cue's selection, there was not a scintilla of truth in his assertion, and Horner was living on his selection in peace and quietness. Then, with reference to Stevens, he had never bought an inch of land from him in his life. The land had been declared forfeited, and was put up for sale and he had bought it. When the hon. member said that he (Mr. Hungerford) had persecuted this man, he said what was utterly untrue. There were 13 selectors living around his land in peace and quietness; they being assisted by him and he by them. [Mr. M'ELHONE: I can prove it on oath; every word I said.]

The question was then put that this bill be now read the second time, and it was negatived on the following division:—

Mr. SPEAKER having announced that the numbers were—Ayes 33, and noes 43,

Cheers were started by some members of the Opposition, were taken up by others, and became general on that side of the House. After the cheering had lasted some seconds.

Mr. SPEAKER called the House to order, and said he had not yet declared the result of the division. Hon. members were certainly in error, and were acting in a very disorderly manner in behaving as they had before he had announced the result, which was—ayes 33, noes 43. The question was resolved in the negative. (Renewed cheering by the Opposition.)

Sir HENRY PARKES said: Mr. Speaker, after the division which has been come to, the House can scarcely expect us to proceed with business to-morrow. I beg to move that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday next. (Hear, hear.)

The motion was agreed to, and the House at eight minutes past 9 o'clock adjourned until 4 o'clock on Tuesday.

The sentence "and he was a man with a heart as big as the Blue Mountains for generosity," uttered by Mr. O'Connor on Wednesday night, had reference to Sir John Robertson, and not to Mr. Garrett, as might be inferred from the report.

THE LAND BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Now that a Land Bill is again before the people of this colony and their representatives for consideration, a few remarks on the system now in vogue, by which the rental value of runs is arrived at, may not be amiss. The "system" seems to be this: Appraisors are selected by the Government on the one hand, and by the Crown lands lessees on the other, and the important matter of the rents of runs is thus quietly and amicably settled to the entire satisfaction of appraisers and lessees alike. But is this the way to arrive at the true value of these runs? Would any private firm adopt any such unbusinesslike course in dealing with property? Why should not these runs be submitted to public competition—to public auction?

If the Government wants to get a railway constructed, they do not send out appraisers with some favoured contractor to determine the price the latter shall get to perform the work; and if the system of appraisement is a good one, why should they not do so? Then again, if the system just alluded to is equitable and every way fair in its operation, why not adopt it in dealing with the other land of the colony besides that leased—that free selected and that otherwise alienated? It may be argued that in the two latter instances the land passes out of the control of the Government for good and all, whereas in the case of leased land such is not the case; but this is no reason why we should not get the full market value of our Crown lands, and I maintain that the appraisement system is not the way to arrive at such value.

Endless tinkering, endless confusion, unceasing strife, fraud, and corruption, have hitherto followed on our attempts at land legislation, and it is certainly high time to alter the whole system of dealing with our public estate; but to my mind no reform is more urgently needed, or more easy of application, than one which would for ever sweep away the system of appraisement, and substitute for it the fair and equitable one of public auction or tender.

SALE OF LANDS, QUEENSLAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In the Herald of the 8th instant, in reference to the committee of inquiry on the sale of lands at Cullin-la-ringo, on the Nogoa, the following statement is made by your Brisbane correspondent:—"The evidence discloses the following facts: That in January, 1881, the Minister for Lands was trying to dispose of some of these lands at 15s. per acre, to somebody in Melbourne; that Mr. Douglas, when in office, had refused 20s. for some of them; that . . . ." This is not correct, nor does the evidence disclose the fact that I ever refused 20s. an acre for any Peak Downs land. When in office I sold a good deal of land at 20s. an acre, and would have been glad to sell more at the same price. An offer to buy Cullin-la-ringo lands at 10s. an acre was made but not accepted.

It is only right, I think, that I should state this.

I am, &c.,
JOHN DOUGLAS.

DEPUTATIONS.

COONAMBLE REQUIREMENTS.

On Wednesday a deputation, consisting of Aldermen Jones and Berg and Messrs. William Evans and George Hairs, from Coonamble, was introduced to the Under-Secretary for Works by Mr. Cass, M.L.A.; the object being to represent the necessity of accelerating the progress of work upon the new courthouse and the local gaol now in course of construction. Mr. Cass said he had been requested by the Municipal Council of Coonamble to bring this matter under the notice of the Department, and he handed a telegram which he had received from that body, in which it was stated that three of the gaoler's children were stricken with fever in consequence of the unhealthy crowding of the gaol. Mr. Jones assured Mr. Rae that to his personal knowledge 13 human beings had, quite recently, been confined within the narrow walls of a cell 13 x 12. And if a female prisoner happened to be imprisoned, as had frequently been the case, the whole of the unfortunate male confinees were necessarily huddled together in one of the two cells. It was urged that such a state of things was little short of barbarity, in a climate where the temperature ranged from 100 degrees minimum to 123 maximum. The deputation requested that the department would without delay issue instructions to the contractor to complete with all possible despatch the two additional cells, which were included in his contract, and if it were necessary to suspend the erection of the gaol wall until this important work was completed.

Mr. RAE referred the deputation to Mr. Barnet, the Colonial Architect, who was present, and who, he had no doubt, would take such an important matter into serious consideration.

Mr. BARNET acknowledged that the matter brought under his notice was one of great moment, and in order to meet the wishes of the deputation he promised to wire to the contractor to complete the additions to the gaol with all possible despatch.

The same gentlemen afterwards waited on the Minister for Lands for the purpose of urging the establishment of a survey district of Coonamble. Mr. Jones said his experience in matters relating to the survey of Crown lands in his district had convinced him that it was impossible the immense amount of work of this kind coming from Coonamble could be transacted in Dubbo with reasonable despatch. The district surveyor at that place was an excellent officer, but it was beyond the capabilities of any one man to satisfactorily discharge the duties of such a large district. Instances could be quoted from the records of the Lands Office wherein great pecuniary loss had resulted to both squatter and selector through the evil complained of.

Sir JOHN ROBERTSON said he quite agreed with the views of the deputation regarding the necessity for the more equitable distribution of the labour attached to survey matters in the Coonamble district. That there had been delays of the character represented there could be no doubt, but it could not fairly be attributed to neglect in the Dubbo office, for the gentleman in charge there was a thoroughly efficient officer, in whom he had the greatest confidence; yet he recognised the justice of the demand made; and if upon reports being received from the proper officers it be found that the land survey business in the Coonamble district is as it was represented to be, he would promise them to comply with the wishes of the deputation immediately.

The Commissioner for Roads was then waited on in reference to the disgraceful state of Namoi-street, which had been partly formed by the Department. It was shown that the work in this street was in a very incomplete state, and through the system of drainage adopted, and the material used in its formation, it was impassable for traffic. It was urged that a maintenance man should be put on to keep it in repair, and to remove the debris which had accumulated in the water tables. Mr. Jones suggested that as this portion of the street had been formed in such an unsatisfactory manner that Department might, with advantage, hand over the money proposed to be expended in its construction to the Municipal Council.

Mr. BENNETT took notes of the representations made, and promised to refer the matter to Mr. Narden for report. He thought the suggestion to hand over the money to the council, for the completion of the street, a good one, as the council were in a better position to undertake the work and complete it than the Roads Department. As soon as a report was received, a communication would be addressed to Mr. Cass conveying the decision.

The Minister for Justice was then interviewed regarding the desirableness of establishing a District Court and Quarter Sessions at Coonabarabran, Coonamble, and Walgett three times a year instead of twice, as at present. Mr. Cass pointed out that the towns named were situated in such a way as to be included in the Northern circuit instead of in the North-western, while the towns of Bourke, Wilcannia, Hay, and Hillston might be included in the Southern circuit. It was urged that the latter towns were 700 miles distant from Coonamble, and it was an injustice to the people of that district for their courts to be attached to a circuit where it was impossible for courts to be held more than twice a year.

Mr. FOSTER, in reply, said that he had under consideration the reports of the Judges with reference to the readjustment of the Northern and North-western circuits, and before finally deciding upon the matter he would take into consideration the representations made. He fully concurred in the suggestion that an extra court a year should be provided; but on account of the local fixtures for 1883 having already been decided upon, he feared that some difficulty would be met in providing the reform required before the end of next year.

MR. WISE, IMMIGRATION AGENT, AND THE CASE OF MRS. HAYES.

The following report on the case of Mrs. Hayes, has been printed by order of the Legislative Assembly:—

"Mr. M'Elhone to ask the Colonial Secretary,—In reference to a large sum of money subscribed by the public for a Mrs. Hayes, whose husband was killed on or about the time of her arrival in the colony, and balance of which money is now in the hands of Mr. Wise, Immigration Agent,—Will he take steps to compel Mr. Wise to hand over the portion held for her, as per his report shown to me, to Mrs. Hayes without delay?"

"An Appeal to the Charitable.—Although the public are too often called upon to alleviate the sufferings of destitute persons, the present special case appears to commend itself so strongly to all classes that it is hoped an immediate response will be the result of the appeal now made. In the ship Clyde, which arrived on Thursday last, there was an immigrant, Mrs. Hayes, with her family of six children, four of whom are under six years of age. Her husband arrived about 12 months ago, and had saved sufficient money to pay for the passages of his wife and family. He was in the service of Mr. M'Mahon, of Ulladulla. On the Monday previous to the ship's arrival he told his employer that he was in very low spirits, in consequence of several remarkable dreams which had disturbed him, and he feared that something fatal would happen to his wife and family. That same afternoon Hayes was thrown from his horse, and died on the following morning from concussion of the brain. Mr. M'Mahon gives him a very good character, and states that he was an industrious man; he also tells me that Hayes was much respected in the district, in which he has resided for the past twelve months. His sudden death leaves his widow in absolute destitution, in a strange land, with her six young children to support. As she is utterly unable to provide for her helpless family, I venture to ask for pecuniary assistance, and will most carefully disburse any amount that may be entrusted to me for the benefit of herself and family.—GEORGE F. WISE."

"On Mrs. Hayes' arrival, as an assisted immigrant, having been sent for by her husband, I had unfortunately to inform her that he had a few days previously been accidentally killed. Finding, upon inquiry, that she was absolutely penniless, I, in my private capacity, made an appeal to the public (copy annexed), in which I undertook that the money collected should be most carefully disbursed by me for the benefit of the widow and her family—the two eldest (her step children) aged 16 and 14; the other four, aged six, five, three, and two years, were her own children. The result was that the sum of £339 3s. 10d. was subscribed, and entrusted to me; it has been thus disbursed:—Paid for clothing for Mrs. Hayes and family, £27 7s. 6d.; paid for furniture purchased by Mrs. Hayes, £41; cash to the two step-children, £10 of which was given by them to Mrs. Hayes, £20; paid expenses in Sydney and for cost of conveyance of herself and family, and furniture, to Ulladulla, also paid for advertising, postage, &c., £12 7s. 8d.; deposited in Sydney Savings Bank to credit of the two step-children, £40 each, for them to receive with accrued interest on each one attaining the age of 21 years, £80; total expended, £181 5s. 2d.; balance to credit of the trust account in the Bank of Australasia, £157 18s. 8d.: total, £339 3s. 10d. How this balance of £157 18s. 8d. is to be used on behalf of Mrs. Hayes and her young family, according as she determines, either to return to Ireland, or to remain in the colony, has been explained on her behalf to Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, so far back as April last, when an account of receipts and disbursements was also given to those gentlemen. The proposal I then made was that if, after providing for the expenses to be incurred in complying with her request, she should be sent back to Ireland, I would remit the remaining balance of the £157 18s. 8d. for her to receive on her arrival in Ireland, or in case she should determine to remain in the colony, she should receive from the trust fund £2 per week, until it was exhausted, to which proposal, up to this present date (November 6) I have not received any reply. Mrs. Hayes has not exhibited sufficient prudence in the management of a further sum of £150 chiefly obtained indirectly through me, and received and expended by her in about 14 months, to justify my entrusting to her the full amount of the present balance, which was intended as much for the support of her family as for herself. I submit that I have acted, not only in the way most conducive to the interests of Mrs. Hayes and her family, but that I have also had a due regard to the wishes of a large majority of the subscribers. I have been and am most anxious to be relieved from the responsibility of the trust which has been cast upon me, and I would willingly adopt any more satisfactory plan than that which I have already indicated as to the disbursement of the present balance of £157 18s. 8d.—GEORGE F. WISE, Agent for Immigration. November 6, 1882."

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16.

SANDEMAN V. WALKER AND OTHERS.

Mr. C. J. Manning and Mr. Knox, instructed by Messrs. Iceton and Faithfull, for Mr. F. Blaxland, of Cooma, for the plaintiff (appellant); Mr. A. H. Simpson, instructed by Messrs. Robertson, Fisher and Rolfe, for Mr. Crang, of Cooma, for the defendants (respondents). The plaintiff, Alfred Sandeman, as an official assignee of the estate of James Quigley, tailor, Cooma, had sought to have a deed of settlement, made by Quigley to his wife and children on May 26, 1880, set aside. The other defendants were Mary Ann Quigley, wife of the insolvent, and James Edward Pretty Walker, trustee under the deed. The statement of claim set forth that in January, 1880, the insolvent was then possessed of half an acre of land in Cooma, with a house thereon, certain household furniture, stock-in-trade, and 25 head of cattle. In that month he commenced action against James Jackson Mawson and James Hain, respectively tenant and owner of an adjoining piece of land, for trespass, alleging that they had encroached four feet upon his property. The actions were tried at Goulburn, in October, 1880, Quigley being defeated in both. The costs were taxed at £198 19s., and when execution was issued, it was found that Quigley had alienated all his property whilst the actions were pending. The plaintiff charged that the indenture was given without valuable consideration, and in anticipation of the said verdicts, with the effect of delaying, hindering, and defrauding the said James Hain and James Jackson Mawson; and that Quigley was actually insolvent at the time of execution.

The defendants, in their answer, had denied that James Quigley had sold his stock and trade, but stated that the cattle had been disposed of to provide funds wherewith to carry on the actions. They contended that excluding the consequences of the lawsuits, James Quigley was in a position to entitle him to make such a settlement, being at the time free from debt. They further stated that the property comprised in the said indenture had been to a great extent created or increased in value by the earnings of Mary Ann Quigley, and that this consideration was the inducing cause for the deed.

His Honor the Primary Judge had dismissed the suit with costs, and among his reasons for doing so had said that although there was undoubtedly a great deal of analogy in this case to one where a man made a settlement in contemplation of embarking in trade, there was not that distinct intention on the part of Quigley to make himself safe. Counsel on both sides had admitted their inability to find any case in which the plaintiff in an action had made himself safe, and he did not think the statute of Elizabeth would apply. He was satisfied—partly by the want of evidence on the other side, and partly by the favourable impression he had formed of the honesty of Quigley, as shown by his examination—that there was no such intention in this case. There was another aspect, and that was the fact that the property had been purchased and improved by Mrs. Quigley's earnings as a midwife; and although the Married Woman's Property Act would scarcely apply, still morally that money was hers. He thought the case so doubtful, and the evidence so much against there having been intention to defraud creditors, that, in the absence of precedents, he ought not to set the deed aside.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, after reviewing the circumstances of the case, said the question they had to determine was not whether there had been any fraudulent intention in the transaction. The question was whether it was in fraud of the statute of Elizabeth, and whether it had the effect of delaying or hindering creditors. It was not necessary that there should be existing creditors at the time of voluntary settlement. It was sufficient that the settlement should be made under circumstances which showed that the settlor contemplated being indebted at some future time. It was said that whereas there were plenty of cases of persons making settlements before going into business, there were none in which a man made himself safe before embarking in litigation. A man knew that he could not go to law without incurring expense, and every person who brought an action could not expect to succeed. In Barling v. Bishop, 29 Bevan, 417, the law was laid down very clearly. In this case the grantor did not give any information as Quigley had done before the Primary Judge. Coupled with the fact of the conveyance at the time these actions ought to have come on for trial there was the fact that the deed had never reached the hands of the trustee Walker, but had remained in the possession of the solicitor who prepared it, on the ground that he held a lien over it for £60. This deed was held by the attorney as if the property belonged to Quigley, and it was hard to resist the conclusion that the deed was prepared in violation of the statute. In order to show that there was no distinction between a settlor who had creditors at the time, and one who had not, his Honor quoted at length from a judgment in Mackay v. Douglas, 14 Equity Cases, 106. His Honor next referred to the case of Blenkinsopp v. Blenkinsopp—one Lojet M'Naughton and Gordon, 495—to show that a settlement made by a man to avoid attachment for his wife's costs in a divorce suit was in fraud of the statute. The principles which regulated the case before the Court were those laid down in the case of Mackay v. Douglas, so far as the mere existence of creditors at the time of the execution of deed was concerned. Whatever might have been the laudable intention of Quigley when he made the deed, still, if it was done with a view to saving him from any possible creditors, or against the costs in these actions, it was in violation of the statute. As he was of opinion that the circumstances showed this, he believed his Honor had come to a wrong conclusion in this case, and that the first prayer of the statement of claim should be granted.

Mr. Justice FAUCETT concurred in the judgment of the Chief Justice. There was no doubt that at one time the law was laid down in the text books that if there were no existing creditors when the settlement was made a case of this kind could not arise. It seemed to him that the Judges at the time considered that it was absolutely necessary to prove some actual intention on the part of the settlor to defraud or hinder his creditors. It was now quite clear from modern cases that they were not confined to circumstances where there are existing creditors. From the two authorities which had been referred to the principle was gathered that they were not to seek for any absolute intention, but they were to decide upon the mere fact whether the result of the act was to delay or defraud creditors. He thought his Honor must have been misreported, or was labouring under a misapprehension, when he said that Quigley had £150 when he executed the deed. Had it been so, he would not have hesitated to support his Honor's decision; but it turned out that the cattle had been sold in January for £110, and the balance of £140 was made up by a pro.-note he had given to his solicitor. He was now overwhelmed by authorities which he could not resist, and he concurred with the Chief Justice in thinking that the appeal must be sustained.

Sir GEORGE INNES also concurred. He drew attention to the fact that not only had the £110 been paid by Quigley to his solicitor before the deed was executed, but the other £40 constituted an additional liability, seeing that it consisted of a promissory note given to the solicitor, who was in point of fact his creditor. There were existing debts and others in contemplation which brought the case within the meaning of the judgment in Barling v. Bishop. However meritorious Quigley's act in making his property over to his wife was, they had to remember that the law was opposed to generosity when it conflicted with justice.

The appeal was therefore upheld, and the first prayer of the statement of claim granted, viz., that the deed be declared void. Costs were given against defendant Quigley.

Jury Court (Admiralty Jurisdiction).—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice WINDEYER, Deputy Judge.)

THE DUCKENFIELD.

Mr. Salomons, Q.C., and Mr. Armstrong, by Messrs. Want, Johnson, and Scarvell, appeared for the promovent: Mr. Manning and Mr. C. B. Stephen, for the respondent.

This was a suit arising out of a collision between the steamers Duckenfield and Boomerang, near Newcastle.

The evidence and arguments of counsel were concluded to-day.

His HONOR reserved judgment.

SHERVEY V. LAWSON.

Mr. Pilcher and Mr. Heydon, by Messrs. Jones and Jones, for the plaintiff; Mr. Stephen, Q.C., and Dr. Donovan, by Messrs. Slattery and Heydon, for the defendant.

This was an action for trespass to 40 acres of land at Capertee.

The hearing had not concluded when the Court rose.

INSOLVENCY COURT—THURSDAY.

(Before the CHIEF COMMISSIONER.)

APPLICATION FOR COMPULSORY SEQUESTRATION.

In the matter of Ellis Somers Piercy versus Daniel Dominic M'Mahon. This case was adjourned to the 30th instant, and his Honor ordered that statement of objections should be filed on or before the 23rd.

MOTIONS FOR RELEASE.

In the matter of George Matthews. On the motion of Mr. S. Bull, and the affidavits read, his Honor ordered that the above estate should be released from sequestration. A similar order was made in the respective matters of George Henry Byrne (on the motion of Mr. O'Connor); Charles James Ward (on the motion of Mr. F. Curtis); and Benjamin Little Bayley and David Thom (on the motion of Mr. Freehill).

ACCOUNTS AND PLANS.

Accounts and plans were confirmed in the several estates of William Young, Rowan Ronald, William Henry Bray, Michael O'Connell, Thomas George William Bray, and Henry Chalker.

RATIFICATION OF DIRECTIONS.

In the matter of Charles Ginger, the directions of creditors were ratified.

SURRENDERS.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT COURT.

THURSDAY.

(Before Mr. District Court Judge DOWLING.)

M'DONALD V. ROBERTSON.

In this case the plaintiff claimed £16 for loss of gain sustained on a purchase of grease which was not up to the sample according to which it was sold; also for expenses incurred in putting the grease cask in order, and for commission on the purchase of iron on behalf of the defendant. The defence was that the grease was up to sample; and that the sales on which commission was charged were not on behalf of defendant, but by plaintiff to defendant. A verdict was given for two items of commission, £1 1s. 9d., but no costs were allowed, except for witnesses. Mr. Bruce Smith, instructed by Messrs Deane and Deane, appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Nash, instructed by Mr. Collyer, for the defendant.

SINGER MANUFACTURING COMPANY V. CLEARY.

The plaintiff sought to recover £100 for detention of a number of sewing-machines. The defendant expressed his willingness to return the sewing-machines on condition that an advertising account was paid. At the suggestion of his Honor a settlement was effected, the defendant agreeing to deliver up the machines on condition that he was paid the account for £12 10s., each party to pay their own costs. The case was formally postponed for a week.

POLICE.

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

Mr. Clarke, S.M., presided in the Charge Court yesterday.

A number of cases of drunkenness and minor offences were dealt with.

Mary Ellen Byred was charged with that being under the age of 16 years she was in the habit of wandering about the streets, having no visible lawful means of support. The child, who was aged 12 years, was brought before the Bench at the instance of Mr. Maxted, boarding-out officer. She was ordered to be sent to the Biloela Industrial School.

Bernard Gagin was charged with having assaulted and beaten Elizabeth Gagin in a violent manner. The accused had struck the prosecutrix across the face with a wooden batten, and had also hit her on the hand and leg. He had, it was stated, first completed a sentence of two months' imprisonment for a similar offence. He pleaded guilty, and was ordered to be imprisoned for two months.

Agnes Conlon, on a charge of drunkenness, was fined 20s., or in default was ordered to be imprisoned for seven days; and on a second charge of having used obscene language in Clarence-street was fined 40s., or in default to be imprisoned for 14 days in addition to previous sentence.

Patrick Devlin, charged with having used obscene language withing the hearing of persons passing in Kent-street, was fined 40s., or in default was ordered to be imprisoned for 14 days.

Mr. Crane, S.M., presided in the Summons Court.

A number of cases of assault and personal quarrel were dealt with.

WATER POLICE COURT.

Mr. Marsh, S.M., sat in the Charge Court yesterday; and Mr. Buchanan, S.M., dealt with the business of the Summons Court.

Patrick H. Ringrose was charged with having resisted Constable Stone whilst in the execution of his duty on the 5th instant. The constable had apprehended a man who was in the company of the defendant. Both the men threw the constable several times, damaging his uniform and ill-using him. The defendant was ordered to forfeit a sum of £5, with 2s. 6d. costs.

Agnes Marshall, 16 years, for having been guilty of riotous behaviour in Rowe-street, and having used indecent language in Phillip-street, was ordered to forfeit £5 5s.

Duncan M'Gregor, 58 years of age, for offending against decency in Phillip-street, was fined £5; and for using obscene language in the Woolloomooloo watchhouse, he was ordered to forfeit a further sum of £3.

Bridget Olliver, 36 years, was charged with having been drunk and disorderly in Woolloomooloo, with having used obscene language, and with having assaulted a constable whilst in the execution of his duty, and, for the three offences, was ordered to forfeit penalties amounting to £6.

Charles Andrews, a seaman, for stealing a pair of trousers, value 5s., the property of William Luckham, was sent to gaol for 14 days.

William Boulton, for having worked a horse with sore shoulders, was fined 10s., and 5s. 6d. costs.

Alfred Turner, charged with keeping a tobacconist's shop open for trade on a Sunday, was ordered to forfeit 10s.

LICENSING BUSINESS.

The Licensing Court sat at noon, when the bench was occupied by Messrs. Dillon (chairman), Buchanan, Marsh, and Addison, S.M.s, and the Hon. J. Macintosh, L.M.

Joseph Spora, licensee of the Sydney and Newcastle Hotel, George-street, applied for permission to transfer his license to Theophilus Dusseri. The application was granted.

An extension of time was granted to Henry Israel, and a music permit to J. H. Ferguson.

Richard Todd, licensee of the Live and Let Live Hotel, in Windmill-street, for having his house open for the sale of liquor at 20 minutes to 6 o'clock on the morning of the 8th November, was fined £3 and costs. Mr. J. Lowe appeared for the defendant. Edward Swadling, licensee of the Whalers' Arms, Miller's Point, was similarly charged, but the Court gave him the benefit of a doubt by dismissing the information. Mr. Levien appeared for the defendant.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

The City Coroner held an inquest yesterday at his office on the body of George Bruce, who died in the hospital on the previous day from the effects of certain injuries. Evidence was adduced showing that on the night of the 6th instant the deceased fell into the water at the Circular Quay, and on being rescued he was found to be in an unconscious state. He was removed to the hospital, where Dr. Muskett, the resident surgeon, examined him. Restorative measures were then applied to the deceased, and he appeared to progress very favourably. A few days afterwards, however, he developed inflammation of both lungs, and gradually sank until the 14th instant, when he died. The jury returned a verdict that the deceased died from inflammation of the lungs, caused by his accidental submersion in water.

Subsequent to the above, the Coroner held an inquest touching the death of one Thomas Glover, who also died in the hospital on the previous day. The evidence tendered in this case was to the effect that on the 15th instant the deceased, whilst walking along Pitt-street in an apparently intoxicated state, fell on the pavement and cut his head severely. He was removed to the hospital, where it was ascertained that the deceased had suffered a rupture of one of the blood vessels of the brain. A verdict was brought in to the effect that death was accidentally caused.

In the afternoon the City Coroner was engaged inquiring into the circumstances which led to the death of John Matthews, who lost his life through an accident at Sanders' Quarry Works, Pyrmont, yesterday morning. The evidence taken went to show that the deceased, who was a married man, was an employee at Sanders' Quarry Works. At about a quarter past 7 o'clock yesterday morning he deceased, together with four other men, were engaged removing a large block of stone from the main body. The deceased was standing behind, and pinning the block as it was being raised from its bed. Their intention was to tilt it over in a certain direction, and this operation had been partly achieved when the stone, weighing about two and a half tons, coming into contact with a projecting object, canted over on the deceased, jamming him in the recess caused by the shifting of the block. The deceased's abdomen and right thigh were crushed, and although Matthews was very soon extricated he died shortly after the accident. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

FITZROY WARD.

Mr. P. M'Mahon, who is opposing Mr. F. Poole in the contest for the representation of Fitzroy Ward in the City Council, addressed an open-air meeting last night from the balcony of Punch's Hotel, William-street. Mr. J. R. Street presided, and there were about 200 persons present.

Mr. M'MAHON, who was well received, commenced by expressing gratification at his large audience. He said it was a proof of the fact that the people were awakening to a sense of their duty as citizens, and that they felt an interest in the matter for which they had assembled. He had not come forward to abuse or assail the character or ability of any man, and if he had done so he would not consider himself worthy of the support of the electors of the ward. (Applause.) He stood before them on his merits, and as far as he was concerned nothing of an ungentlemanly or an unkind spirit would be exhibited. With regard to the last election, he went on to say that he came forward almost against his inclination, and it was only a few days prior to the election that he was nominated. On that occasion he received nearly 800 votes, being then an altogether untried man. He, however, promised at that time that he would come forward again, and in fulfilment of that promise, and out of gratitude for the strong proof of confidence then shown towards him, he came before the electors that evening. (Applause.) Regarding municipal matters, he was certainly not satisfied with the manner in which business had recently been transacted by the City Council. He wanted to know why that body could not carry out their duties quietly and peacefully like any other public body. (Hear, hear.) The only reason he could assign for the unseemly conduct of the City Council was that there were by far too few good commercial men amongst them. (Hear, hear.) The infusion of new blood into any organisation which had drifted into such a downward state always had the effect of bringing about a welcome change—a healthier and better state of things. (Applause.) The contracts given out by the council should be thrown open to fair public competition and decided on their merits without favour or affection, honestly and beyond suspicion. He would draw the attention of those present to the state of the streets in the city, and also the manner in which they were repaired. They required immediate attention, and the council should give them their earnest consideration. He would next refer to the water supply of the city, and also to the attention due to the removal of sewage from the streets. These matters, the speaker remarked, were in the hands of the Government; but nevertheless the council should urge for their being dealt with with the utmost despatch, as they were necessary works. He held that the question of water supply ranked in importance before all others of the day. It was absolutely necessary that there should be a never-failing and plentiful supply in this large and populous city, as without which the consequences would be deplorable. To the matter of sewage removal from this city was attached a great deal of importance, and it could not be expected that the city of Sydney would ever be in a healthy state unless a proper system for the removal of all sewage were carried out. It was a very unwise thing to contaminate the waters of the harbour with the filth of the city, and if he (Mr. M'Mahon) were elected as the representative of Fitzroy Ward, he would be prepared to consider the adoption of a proper system for the removal of sewage, together with the water supply question, before anything else. (Applause.) He considered that the health and lives of the citizens would be given serious attention to if those questions were at once dealt with. As to the mode of street-forming, he was decidedly in favour of laying down wooden blocks in the principal thoroughfares of the city, and in all other streets, if the funds would permit that work being carried out to such an extent. In a country like this, where so much hardwood was at hand, that mode of street-making should be given preference to all others. It had been tried in King and Pitt streets and found to work admirably so far as the wood itself was concerned. As to the suitableness of the mode there was no question. The quality of the wood used was of course to be considered, as in George-street the American blocks had proved a failure. The ordinary blue and tar metal would suit very well for the back streets, but nothing could excel, so far, roads constructed with durable hardwood blocks. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the pavements, by constructing them according to the tarring process—laying asphalt on them—economy as well as cleanliness was shown. He, however, was totally opposed to the owners of property in one portion of a street being called upon to pay their share of the cost in connection with asphalting footpaths, and their next door neighbours' portion being allowed to be left undone, because probably they were unable to do so or refused. The footpaths should receive attention in the above direction on both sides, and from one end to the other, and the owners of property in front of which asphalt was laid down should be compelled to pay for their portion in the same manner as they paid their city or water rates. (Hear, hear.) He was in favour of properly watering the streets, so that tradesmen's goods should not receive injury from dust. Regarding the lighting of the city, the candidate thought that at present the system was very defective. One company should not under any circumstances be allowed to hold a complete monopoly of the lighting of the streets. He thought the present assessment rate was altogether excessive, and he was of opinion that a tax of 1s. was quite sufficient at present. He remarked that the revenue of the colony was now so prosperous that the city should receive additional endowment from the Government. There were many public works much needed in Fitzroy Ward, and if the electors had sufficient confidence in him to make him their representative in the council, he would lose no time in bringing them under the notice of that body. He would seek a change in regard to the formation of the street drains leading into Woolloomooloo Bay, more especially along Palmer and Bourke streets from Plunket-street, and he would have them laid down with bluestone or granite and flushed with water, so that they might give a better appearance to the streets than that given to them now by the shabby-looking wooden drains. He would like to see Woolloomooloo Bay frequently dredged, and he was totally opposed to the wharf in that neighbourhood, which was constructed at considerable expense, being made the receptacle for coal, firewood, and other like material. After referring to many alleged much-needed improvements to the streets in Fitzroy Ward, the speaker concluded his remarks amidst applause.

Mr. W. G. MURRAY moved a vote of confidence in the candidate.

Mr. ALEXANDER KETHEL seconded the motion.

Messrs. W. BRADLEY and W. T. COONAN spoke in support of it, and the motion, on being put to the assemblage, was carried unanimously.

A vote of thanks was passed to the chairman, and the proceedings then terminated.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL.

An adjourned meeting of the Trades and Labour Council was held last night at the Hyde Park Hotel, for the purpose of considering the propositions formulated by Mr. G. R. Dibbs, of obviating the ruinous effect of future strikes, by the establishment of a conciliation and arbitration board, chosen from among the employers and employees. Mr. Poole, the president, occupied the chair. The following societies were represented:—Seamen's Union, Progressive Carpenters and Joiners, Typographical Association, Shipwrights, Plumbers, Bricklayers, Coachmakers, Ironmoulders, Curriers, Plasterers, Newcastle Labour League, Quarrymen, Hunter River Coal-miners, Stonemasons. Mr. Edmunds opened the discussion, concurring in the principles of Mr. Dibbs' scheme, and dissenting from the code of rules which that gentleman had drawn up, inasmuch as it was palpably too one-sided—that was, in favour of the capitalists. Mr. Dibbs was not one to submit to arbitration if he did not agree with its equity, and he (the speaker) believed that the majority of masters, as well as men, would refuse to recognise the award of such a board unless it were to their individual liking. He considered the council's code of rules good enough, where applicable, and he would certainly never sanction that drawn up by Mr. Dibbs. He argued that strikes were a necessary evil, the only method by which the selfishness of employers could be checked. Mr. West argued that a conciliation court was essential, and if the present plan were adopted it would be for the council to provide the necessary machinery. The speaker expressed a hope that Mr. Dibbs would interpose for the settlement of the wharf labourers' strike, as he had brought the evils of such movements into prominence. As a rule strikes could be settled before a blow was struck. Mr. Crocker considered that most strikes could be settled by arbitration, and that no cold water ought to be thrown on the project. He had confidence in the plan of six delegates representing each side, and was sure the working-classes had nothing to fear in the remote contingency of a dispute coming to be decided on a casting vote. Mr. Simmons supported the amendment proposed by Mr. Sullivan at last meeting. He considered that the evils of strikes had been immensely exaggerated. Take the case of the wharf labourers. They were demanding 1s. 3d. per hour because they conceived their labour worth an increase, in the same way that their employers charged more for their merchandise. The worst evil of strikes was the improvident habits of the men. He was willing to give a trial to the conciliation, but could not approve of Mr. Dibbs' rules. Mr. D. Jones regarded Mr. Dibbs' proposals as a blow aimed at trades-unionism. Nothing was to be got by the operatives unless by fighting for it. The proposals were little better than an attempt to hoodwink the labouring classes by a man who, if he could, would have swamped the country with Chinamen. He would vote for having nothing to do with the Dibbs scheme. If they did they would only be stultifying themselves. Mr. Bishop agreed with the basis of Mr. Dibbs' proposals, and held that they should be altered and adopted, and given a trial. Mr. Marshall was against the conciliation and arbitration scheme. Mr. Lawrence recommended the council to disassociate Mr. Dibbs from the proposals, which would then appear far more feasible. The idea was not new, had been acted on 20 years ago, and he gave Mr. Dibbs credit for an honest single-minded wish to provide a means for preventing these injurious strikes. The coal-miners of Newcastle had taken up the plan, only there was a difference of opinion as to how many delegates should sit on the board. Mr. Baker and Mr. Ferrier were against the scheme, as impracticable. Mr. Sullivan, in replying on behalf of the amendment, said the principal objections affected details, not principles. In nine cases out of ten trade disputes were ultimately settled by arbitration, and it should be had recourse to in the first instance. Mr. Dickson replied in a lengthy effective speech on the whole question. Mr. Meikle's motion, "That in the opinion of this council the suggestion of Mr. Dibbs is not applicable to the trades of the colony," was then put and carried by 12 votes to 7, Mr. Sullivan's amendment being negatived. The meeting then adjourned.

The manager of the Union Steamship Company is in receipt of a cable message from New Zealand, stating that the Ringarooma arrived at Russell on Tuesday morning, and that the Wairarapa left the same port for Sydney at 5 p.m. on Wednesday evening.

The Ranelagh (s.) left Rockhampton on Saturday, 11th instant, at 10.30 a.m., arrived at Maryborough on the 12th, at 9 a.m.; left Maryborough on the 13th, at 8.30 a.m., arrived at Brisbane same day at 11.30 p.m.; left Brisbane on the 14th, at 11 a.m., rounded Cape Moreton same day at 3.10 p.m., and arrived at Sydney on the 16th at 2.30 a.m. The passage from Brisbane wharf to Sydney round Cape Moreton was made in 39½ hours. Experienced strong south-east wind to Maryborough, thence to Brisbane moderate easterly wind, thence to port light variable winds and fine weather.

The E. and A. Co.'s steamer Menmuir sailed from Hongkong on October 16, and from Foochow on October 24. Passed Bashee Straits on the 29th of same month, and arrived at Port Darwin on November 3; arrived at Thursday Island on the 7th, at Cooktown on the 9th, at Townsville on the 11th, and at Brisbane on the 14th, and entered Port Jackson on the 16th at 2 p.m. Experienced strong N.E. monsoons in the China Sea. From Mindoro Island to Port Darwin had light winds and calms. Thence to Sandy Cape had blow from the S.S.E. and fine weather. Since then had light winds, calms, and fine weather. The Menmuir brings a large cargo for Sydney, Melbourne, and Adelaide.

The Corinna (s.) cleared Launceston Heads at 7 a.m. on the 14th; passed Gabo at 11 a.m. on the 15th; arrived at Eden at 2 p.m. on the 15th, sailed at 3.30 p.m. same day; passed Jervis Bay at 5.30 a.m. on the 16th, and arrived in Sydney at about 2 p.m. Had fresh N.E. winds and strong head sea to Cape Everard, and variable winds and showery weather to Eden; thence moderate southerly breezes and fine weather till arrival.

The Helen Nicoll (s.) crossed the Clarence bar at 1.20 p.m. on the 15th, and entered Sydney Heads at 5.30 p.m. on the 16th. Experienced light variable winds and a smooth sea throughout the passage. The large codfish caught by D. B. Selman on the Clarence River arrived in Sydney per Helen Nicoll, and will be exhibited by Mr. W. Attwater.

The Rodondo (s.), cleared Port Phillip Heads at 6.30 p.m. on the 14th, and entered Port Jackson at 4.30 p.m. on the 16th. Experienced light variable winds and fine weather throughout the passage.

The You Yangs (s.), left Brisbane at 6.30 p.m. on the 14th instant, rounded Cape Moreton at 1 a.m. on the 15th, passed South Solitary at 7.40 p.m. on the 15th; entered Sydney Heads at 7.45 on the 16th. Experienced light variable winds and fine weather throughout the passage.

The New England (s.), crossed the Clarence bar at noon on the 15th instant, and arrived at Sydney at 7.50 p.m. on the 16th. Experienced light variable breezes and fine weather throughout the passage. Cargo: 2040 sacks sugar, 200 pockets sugar, 30 hogsheads rum, 70 bags bags, and sundries.

By our telegram from Sourabaya, it will be seen that a British ship, name unknown, has been totally lost off Baly Island, in the Java sea.

The Pizzaro was towed from below Garden Island round to Darling Harbour yesterday.

The barque Waratah, trading between Newcastle and Tasmania, has recently changed hands, she now being owned by the Don Trading Company, of Launceston.

The R.M.S. Peshawur, after discharging a portion of her cargo into lighters, in Neutral Bay, was yesterday taken round to Darling Harbour and berthed at the Central Wharf, where the remainder of her cargo will be put out.

The rapidly increasing trade between Launceston and Beaconsfield, and George Town (says the Launceston Examiner of November 11), has rendered the present line of steamboats unable to meet the requirements of the traffic, especially that of passengers, and Captain J. Patterson has succeeded in obtaining a steamboat in Sydney which will be a credit to the river, and afford every convenience to passengers. Captain W. N. Ling, who arrived from Sydney on Thursday, informs us that Captain Patterson's new boat is named the Indignant, and was built in Sydney about six months ago by Mr. Halston, the well-known shipbuilder of that town, and her dimensions are—Length 95ft. overall, with 84ft. length of keel, beam 16ft. 6in., and depth 5ft. 1in. The Indignant is licensed to carry 320 passengers in Sydney Harbour, and will therefore be admirably adapted for pleasure trips, &c., on the Tamar, being well fitted up in every respect. Captain Ling states that whilst doing a run from Sydney to Gosport on the 2nd instant, the Indignant steamed a measured nautical mile in 15 seconds under six minutes, and she is guaranteed to steam 11 knots an hour. The vessel was surveyed by the Government surveyor in Sydney, and after ordering a new propeller shaft pronounced everything in first-class order. The Indignant will leave Sydney to-day, and probably arrive here on Monday.

The Great Britain Tin-mining Company, Limited, have declared a 13th interim dividend of 1s. per share, payable on the 27th instant, which will absorb £2400.

The Queensland National Bank, Limited, received by the Ranelagh this morning from Queensland 6818oz. gold, valued at £25,567.

The annual report of the Royal Insurance Company for 1871 shows net fire premiums amounting to £883,324, and fire losses £591,748. The income from life premiums reached £250,181, the claims were £172,700. Dividends to the amount of 25s. for the year were paid, absorbing £120,646.

In the Import markets a fair amount of animation continues to characterise the trade. Business in flour is still very dull; no one is disposed to buy beyond the smallest quantity requisite for immediate consumption. The weakness of the market was apparent at Messrs. Tate Brothers' sale, this morning, when out of a catalogue comprising several hundred tons, chiefly New Zealand, only a small quantity could be sold, including about six tons of a good brand of New Zealand, which brought £10 17s. 6d. Wheat also was an unsaleable line, except at much lower rates than have been ruling; 4s. 3d. to 4s. 6d. is full value of New Zealand, and best colonial cannot be quoted over 6s. Only 14 tons of flour were delivered from the country this week. In tea, a line of new season's was placed at 58s. per half chest. A good demand continues for dried fruits, and currants are firm at 5½d. In fish, the demand for tinned salmon is far from active, 7s. 9d. is outside value. Nothing of importance transpired indicating alteration of values of oilmen's stores. The cablegram advising fancy prices in London for hops, and the fact that the mail reports none shipped for the colony, must confirm views of speculative holders who bought up stocks in this market. In liquors we hear of business in Hennessy's single star at 34s. 3d. Catto's whisky had attention at 28s.; and Royal Blend at 18s. Wines are commanding more notice; port was done at 6s., and a fair trade in sherry at 5s. 6d. In metals, a firmer feeling is noted on the part of holders of Gospel Oak galvanised iron, sales having been made at £25, and at £26 and £27 for lots of long lengths; Davies' Elephant, 28-gauge, moved at £26 15s. Tinplates are scarcely so firm; further sales of I.C. coke are noted at 19s. 6d. In jute goods we note the quittance of a good line of Dundee cornsacks at 8s. 0d. About half the Apollo's cargo of Norwegian lumber has been placed privately. The whole of the 6 x ⅞ T. and G., and beaded boards have been sold at 15s. 9d.; T. and G. boards selling at 15s. to 15s. 6d., and 6 x ⅝ at 17s. 6d., and the weatherboards at 6s. 0d. to 6s. 9d.; white pine doors at 13s. to 13s. 6d., and kauri doors at 13s. to 14s. 3d. On the wharfs, lucerne hay is selling from £3 to £4 per ton; maize, 4s. 2d. to 4s. 3d.; oats, 3s. 3d. to 3s. 6d.; potatoes, New Zealand, prime quality, £7 to £7 10s.; Circular Head, £7 10s to £8; onions, £8 to £9; hay chaff, £5 15s. to £6 per ton; butter, 11d. to 1s. per lb.; eggs, 11d. to 12d. per dozen; cheese, 11d. to 1s. per lb.; bacon, 7d. to 9d. per lb.; fowls, 4s. to 5s. per pair; ducks, 5s. to 6s. 6d.; geese, 6s. to 8s.; turkeys, 11s. to 20s.; millet brooms, 8s. to 10s. per dozen.

Mr. F. L. Barker reports a good attendance and competition at his sale of wool and sheepskins held to-day. Prices continue firm, especially lots of greasy, well-grown, light, and free. Good parcels of scoured and washed fleece also command attention. Best sheepskins reached 7½d. per lb. The principal lines of wool disposed of were:—Greasy: JRC, 24 bales fleece at 11¼d., pieces at 8d., bellies at 6½d., locks at 5½d.; GB, 15 bales fleece at 10½d. and 10¼d., pieces at 8d. and 6½d., bellies at 6d. and 5½d.; J. Collits, 9 bales at 9½d.; JW, 8 bales at 10½d. per lb. Scoured: HB over New England, 7 bales first combing at 18½d., second at 15½d. and 11d., thirds at 12½d.; MB, 6 bales at 18d.; Cain over Lowrie Creek, 10 bales washed fleece at 16d. per lb.

Messrs. Hill, Clark, and Co. report that they offered a catalogue of wool to-day, comprising 2294 bales; the competition was very brisk, buyers representing the Continent and America operating with great spirit. 2260 bales were sold, amongst which were the following brands:—Duck Creek, 1196 bales at 9d.; Murdadoo, 98 at 8¾d.; C&Co., 201 at 8¾d.; S over A, at 10d.; 2 anchors at 9d.; JXM, at 10½d.; AM over Good Hope, at 11¼d.; Good Hope, at 10½d.; AM, at 10d.; GQ, at 10¼d.; W. H. White, at 11½d.; AH, at 9¼d.; AB, at 10d.; JB, at 10d.; HWS, 39 at 12½d.; BWK, at 9¾d.; C&Co., 53 pieces at 6¼d.; Morbella, 137 first pieces at 8d., 31 bellies at 8d.; CWC over Junee, at 11¼d.; YS, 80 at 9¼d., 17 first pieces at 8d., 8 bellies at 8d.; JH over Bumble, 13 at 10¼d.; RW over Fairview, 12 at 10d.; JTX, 29 at 9½d.; DB over Clarendon, at 12½d.; MH over Bankside, 21 at 13d.; JB over W over Eurongelly, at 12¼d. [illegible] super combing at 19½d., 18 first combing at 18d., 16 second combing at 16½d.

Messrs. Brunker and Wolfe offered a catalogue of wool and sheepskins at their wool stores to-day. There was a large attendance of buyers. Wool sold to 11¼d., sheepskins to 6½d. per lb.

Our commercial files by the Kaisar-i-Hind to the 6th October were delivered this morning. The money market was a trifle firmer. Three months' bills were quoted at from 4 to 4¼ per cent. Very little business had been done in colonial stocks, and prices were unaltered, but firm. The following were the closing quotations for banks:—New South Wales, 65, 67; Australasia, 82, 84; New Zealand, 27¼, 28¼; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 27, 28; London Chartered, 22¼, 23¼; Oriental, 16¼, 17½; Queensland National, 9, 9½; Union, 64, 65. The shipments to the colonies show a further decline, the total for the month being £1,712,200 against £1,920,700 in the previous month. To Sydney, the value was £497,400, a decrease of £116,500; to Melbourne, £477,800, a decrease of £22,000; to Queensland, £171,000, a decrease of £3600; to Adelaide, 199,200, a decrease of £65,400. The shipments to Sydney included drapery, £129,200; leather and saddlery, £26,640; rails and general machinery, £32,800; books, paper, stationery, £20,868; gunpowder, 1320cwt.; hardware, cutlery, £33,300; bar and rod iron, 861 tons; galvanised iron, 789 tons; sheet lead, 67 tons; tinplates, 3118 boxes; linseed oil, 7940 gallons; slates, 417 tons; cement, 4480 barrels; tobacco, 800lb.; brandy in bulk, 19,160 gallons; in case, 9800 gallons; rum, 16,490 gallons; geneva, 11,780 gallons; British spirits, 8220 gallons; in case, 8450 gallons; red wine, 7780 gallons; white wine, 10,830 gallons; beer (glass), 2086 gallons; malt, 1388 quarters; preserved fish, not rated, £4660; sardines, £1460; assorted oilmen's stores, £8620; vinegar, 4500 gallons; white salt, 857 tons; candles, 1462cwt.; raisins, 888cwt.; currants, 1826cwt.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1882.

In the Legislative Council, yesterday,

Mr. W. H. Sutton moved for a return showing the numbers and ages of all scholars who have passed a satisfactory examination in the subjects prescribed for a fifth class in the Public-schools in all cities and towns of the colony having a population of 4000 and more persons, according to the census of 1882.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. Stewart moved for the production of a copy of the programme of lessons administered during the current quarter in the fifth form of each of the superior Public schools within the metropolitan district, and for a return showing the number of scholars in each of the fifth forms referred to above, and how long they generally continue to attend.

The motion was passed.

The House went into committee to consider an amendment made by the Legislative Assembly in the Congregational Union Incorporation Bill. The amendment was agreed to, and the bill was returned to the Assembly.

The House then went into committee for the further consideration of the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, and had reached clause 312, when Mr. A. Campbell, in consequence of the defeat of the Government in the Legislative Assembly, moved the Chairman out of the chair.

Progress was reported, and the House adjourned at 21 minutes past 9 until 4 o'clock p.m. on Wednesday next.

In the Legislative Assembly, yesterday,

Ministers replied to questions respecting the office of Chief Mining Surveyor, the papers relating to the North Shore bridge, the map showing the alienation of Crown lands, the Clarence River railway, the salaries of mail guards, sorters, and letter-carriers, the South Head Roads Bill, the promised courthouse for the eastern suburbs of Sydney, the steel rails to be used on the Great Northern Extension from Tamworth, the want of a waiting-room for tram passengers at Moore Park gates, and the claim of Mrs. Emma Louisa a-Beckett.

Sir Henry Parkes laid on the table a return of the leave of absence granted to Civil servants.

On the motion of Mr. Cameron, the Mort's Bay Improvement Bill was referred to a select committee for inquiry and report.

The adjourned debate on the Land Bill was resumed.

Sir Patrick Jennings argued that it would be opposed to the whole spirit of the principles of responsible government for the Ministry to accept the amendments of which Mr. Garrett had given notice. The bill contained nothing new except a consolidation of all the Land Acts which had been passed since 1861. He was not prepared to accept the proposition that the prosperity which they enjoyed was due to that law. Their prosperity was in spite of the law, and he could fancy a state of circumstances in connection with which they could have had a greater degree of prosperity without selection before survey. The colonies all differed in soil and climate, and it was not easy to make comparisons which would hold good in respect of their sheep, wool, or other products. Victoria, for instance, besides wool, produced wheat in great quantities; and South Australia supplied most of the other colonies with cereals. Sir John Robertson deserved well of the colony for his land law, but the circumstances of the colony had changed, and the hon. gentleman should be willing to accept such changes in his law as were required by their altered circumstances. The great blot in the law of 1861 was selection before survey. It had been admitted on all hands that if the runs were defined and the squatter were allowed a reasonable term, there was not a pastoral tenant who would not gladly pay an increased rent, but owing to the insecurity of the tenure at present he could not do so, while the law led to strife, law suits, and other evils. If selection were bona fide, as it was in the United States and Canada, it would not be unjust to the squatter, as the selector would not in that case be allowed to traffic with his selection. There were nine planks in the platform of Mr. Stuart, and he believed that some of the Opposition who would vote against the bill would not necessarily vote for the whole of the platform. Both selector and squatter were tired of the contest, and they now appealed to the outside public to prevent its continuance. It was curious that in this discussion the question of interest on the selectors' balances had not been raised, and he for one could not accept remission in any platform. There was nothing in the platform of Mr. Stuart about tenant right which was important, as the squatter should receive compensation for his improvements if his run should be resumed by the Government. It would be impossible to discontinue auction selections, and especially so if they did not give a tenure to the squatters. There would be no necessity for auction sales if they gave a tenure, as the sheep farmers did not want landed estates, and would much rather pay a reasonable rent than purchase land. If a deficiency should occur in the revenue from land sales he would provide for local self-government. Both sides seemed to intend consigning pre-leases to an untimely grave, but it would be an act of injustice to the present holders to do so. He would have large areas surveyed for selection at a low price, and he thought the system of agricultural areas should be tried. In such areas, churches, schools, and other means of civilisation could be provided. A local board might give authority to select, and no question respecting the selection should afterwards be raised. These were his opinions, and he should vote against the second reading of the bill.

Mr. Lackey, after explaining the difficulties to be met with before 1861 in purchasing land from the Government, said there was no collusion between the Ministry and any member of the House in relation to amendments in their bill. The law of 1861 had become a necessity in consequence of settlement having been virtually blocked by the surveys being so much in arrear of the demand for land. The whole colony demanded the change, and the irregularities which had occurred were not confined to the land laws of New South Wales, as similar irregularities had occurred in the other colonies, and in particular in Queensland, where large estates had been secured on very low terms, and difficulties had been experienced between the squatter and selector quite as great as had happened in this colony. No matter what law might be passed contentions and difficulties would take place, and it was not to be denied that both squatter and selectors were never in a more prosperous state than they were at the present time. When the squatters had fixity of tenure they were not so prosperous as they were now, and it would require very little time to show the beneficial results of the law of 1861 in reference to all other interests. There were many districts in which there had previously been only a small and scattered population, and which were now thriving and prosperous under the operation of free selection, and he instanced the districts of Monaro, Kiama, Gerringong, Shoalhaven, Cassilis, Scone, Merriwa, Inverell, Macleay, Wingecarribee, Taralga, Queanbeyan, Crookwell, Cooma, Bombala, Kiandra, Jindabyne, Tumut, and Richmond River. There had also been a large accession of pastoralists, agriculturists, and others from the other colonies, who had availed themselves of the liberal provisions of the law, and had made New South Wales their home. He quoted statistical returns to prove the improved condition of the colony in respect of revenue, public improvements, products, and exports, in 1881 as compared with the year 1861, and he claimed that the land revenue had been properly appropriated for undertakings which were of general public utility, and that the position of the colony in the English money market was the highest of any of the colonies. He hoped the House would accept the bill, and reject the proposed amendments.

Mr. M'Elhone inveighed against the bill at some length, and said he would oppose any Ministry which allowed free selection all over the colony. He said Sir Henry Parkes, Mr. Watson, and Dr. Renwick had condemned the Act of 1861, and that he was afraid a proper measure would not be passed so long as Sir John Robertson possessed political power in the colony. For one iota of good which had been done by the present law there had been a thousand evils, and if there had been a proper law all the good could have been obtained without the evil. Sir John Robertson and Mr. Garrett were to blame for not seeing the injury which was being done by the law, and providing a remedy. If the law had been a good one people would have settled in communities where there would have been schools for their children. A proper law would have produced more revenue from rents and conditional purchases than was obtained now from sales and all other sources of land revenue. In 1879 he proposed dividing the colony into pastoral and agricultural districts, and he would have carried his motion if it had not been for members who had promised to support him being got at by the Government. He would draw a line from about Hay to the north, and let the squatters have leases of the pastoral districts for 14 or 21 years, on terms, and when their runs were resumed, he would allow them compensation from a fund created by a tax on stock. The selectors had done well in the coast districts, because the land was only fit for agriculture, and they had no enemies to fight against. Selection should have been confined to such districts as Grenfell, the higher parts of Liverpool Plains, New England, Albury, Yass, and Wagga, where agriculture might pay. It was monstrous to allow it to prevail in every part of the colony, teaching the people and even the children to commit perjury and other crimes. It was a cursed law which encouraged people to select for the purpose of selling out again to the squatter. The selectors had to contend with the squatters, and he would not have been surprised if some of them had shot their oppressors like dogs. The selectors had also to bear with inspectors like Mr. Delaney, of Hartley, who was a ruffian of the blackest dye, and Mr. Geary, who was as corrupt as he could be. He was afraid hon. members would vote for this unprincipled, corrupt, and rotten Government, and that the law of 1861 would be continued. He had no confidence in the House, which had been demoralised by this Government.

No other hon. member rising to speak, the House divided, and the second reading was negatived by 43 to 33.

Sir Henry Parkes then moved that the House do adjourn till Tuesday next, which was agreed to, and the House at 9.7 p.m. adjourned accordingly.

The Government have been beaten upon their Land Bill, and beaten somewhat badly. At the close of Wednesday's proceedings there was every likelihood that the debate on the second reading of the bill would last for days, if not for weeks. The Premier intimated that he would like an idea as to when the debate might close, but no such idea was given him. In England, Premiers are in the habit of consulting leaders of Oppositions as to when divisions may be taken, but no such custom prevails here, and the Land Bill was the last measure in connection with which the House would have been disposed to make a change. It was intimated that members would take their own counsel as to when and how long they would speak. On the Opposition side of the House, honourable members would have been as little disposed to take the ruling of Mr. Stuart on that point as to have taken that of Sir Henry Parkes. It was confidently expected that at least a score of members would have given a reason for their vote if not a defence of their opinions. The Premier, the House understood, would explain his attitude in regard to the bill, and the subject was one in connection with which the head of the Government might fairly have been expected to speak. Perhaps the turn which matters took last evening will give as much surprise to the House itself as it will give to the country. It was sufficiently well known that many members were but waiting for their opportunity. The opportunity, however, did not come. After a speech from Sir Patrick Jennings, a second from Mr. Lackey, and a third from Mr. M'Elhone, the debate suddenly collapsed, the vote was taken, and the Government defeated by a majority of 10, the numbers being 43 against the bill and 33 in favour of it.

It is not necessary to discuss whether the sudden closing of the debate was due to the tactics of the Opposition or to those of the Government; or, indeed, whether it was due to any tactics at all. It may be pointed out, however, that the subject was worthy of a more thorough treatment from both parties. The only speakers on the Ministerial side of the House were the Minister for Lands, the Minister for Works, and Mr. Hungerford. Neither of the last-named gentlemen attempted an answer to Mr. Stuart or to Mr. Garrett, and other supporters of the Government were either not able, or not willing, to do battle for their cause. The Government itself allowed the bill to take its chance, and the result was as we have stated. The fate of the measure that was ushered in with so many promises, and on which so much was to depend, has been a curious one. But whatever else the vote of last night may mean, it will be taken not only as a triumph for the Opposition itself, but also for the cause with which it has identified itself. Both Mr. Stuart and Mr. Garrett, however they may have differed in other things, contended that what the country requires is not a partial amendment of the law, but a radical one—not a change of phraseology, but a change of principle. The division was an endorsement of this view. The importance of the division may be denied. We may be told that it was a surprise, and not the expression of the deliberate judgment of the House. It is, however, the only expression of its judgment that we have, and as such it must be held to be an indication of a remarkable change of sentiment.

No one can have failed to see that within the House as well as beyond it, opinion in regard to the land question is not what it was. A few weeks ago a free selectors' conference declared itself in favour of surveyed areas. At this conference also a resolution condemning fixity of tenure was rejected. If the members of the conference were not prepared to declare themselves in favour of fixed tenure they were not disposed to declare against it. It is by representatives of free selectors especially that we might have expected unlimited free selection to be advocated, and yet a conference, composed of such representatives, gave it as its conviction that free selection is a mistake. If experience is modifying the opinions of the representatives of selectors we cannot be surprised that it is modifying those of the representatives of the people generally. There are, indeed, members of Parliament who confess to no change. It was confidently expected that the advocates of free selection would have proved sufficiently numerous to pass a bill of which free selection is the corner stone. This has not turned out to be the case, and the inference is that the popular belief in the essential doctrine of the land laws is weaker instead of stronger than it was seven or even two years ago. No such demand for a radical change in the law as the one now made was made in 1875 or in 1881. Sir John Robertson is as steadfast as ever. While admitting that there are evils to be deplored he contended that the evils exist in spite of free selection before survey, not because of it. While venturing on a new campaign he stuck to the old war cry.

From the leader of the Opposition it was natural to expect a dissentient voice. In asking for a change in our land policy, as well as in the land law, which he did in his extremely able speech of last week, Mr. Stuart did no more than he has done before. But so much could hardly have been said of Mr. Garrett. The member for Camden said very truly that in contending for larger areas for selectors he was doing no more than he did in years gone by. But in proposing to divide the lands of the colony into classes, and to give fixity of tenure for seven and fourteen years, Mr. GARRETT did much more than he ever did before. He contended, indeed, that in asking for groups of districts he was not asking for agricultural areas. But in proposing that the colony be divided into districts, he was proposing what those who condemn indiscriminate selection before survey have always advocated. For agricultural areas, in the narrow sense in which the phrase is sometimes used, very few contend. All that has been asked for is settlement districts, and a proposal to establish such districts stood in the front of Mr. GARRETT's amendments. The member for Camden claimed that it was not so much the principle of free selection as the limitation of it that has led to the evils to be removed. But it is with the principle of free selection especially that his amendments interfered. If Mr. GARRETT's amendments should ever become law, in one district 40 million acres will be in the hands of squatters for seven years, and in another 30 million acres will be held for 14 years. Modifications like these would interfere very materially with indiscriminate free selection. It is difficult to see how the Government could have accepted any such amendments as those proposed, and have kept its self-respect. But there can be little doubt that changes in some such direction as the one indicated by Mr. STUART and Mr. GARRETT will have to be made sooner or later. What are the objects to be aimed at in the alienation of the public lands? Are they not the settlement of population, the prevention of fraud and litigation, and the securing of proper returns at the Treasury for the lands that pass into private hands? It can hardly be denied that under our existing land system these objects are not accomplished, or that their not being accomplished is traceable to indiscriminate free selection. The smallness of the amount received from the pastoral tenants was as earnestly bewailed by Mr. GARRETT as by Mr. STUART, and it has been as heartily deplored by members of the Ministry as by those who sit on the side of the Opposition. For the use of lands which, on Mr. WATSON'S own testimony, ought to produce about two millions a year, the TREASURER gets a little more than half a million a year. Why is the amount of the annual rental so small? No one disputes that the reason of its smallness is the insecurity of the tenure on which the lands are held. It is also this insecurity that forces the leaseholder to become a purchaser, and to secure by foul means what he cannot always secure by fair ones. To protect himself from the selector the Crown tenant buys what he does not want to buy, and what in many instances he can ill afford to pay for. Instead of purchasing for the purposes of settlement, he purchases to ward off settlement. In this way, although the land is alienated, the country is not settled. Areas which ought to supply homes for a thriving population supply arenas in which the free selectors and the squatters may fight their battles. The supporters of the Land Bill have attributed all this to human infirmity, but there is a growing conviction to the effect that it is traceable to free selection before survey. That, it is now fair to assume, is the judgment of the House, and it remains to be seen whether it is the judgment of the country. In the crisis which the victory of the Opposition has created the Government can of course do one of two things. They can either appeal to the constituencies or throw upon the Opposition the task in which they have failed. Which of the two courses is to be followed will be known on Tuesday next.

Some of the metropolitan residents have probably studied Mr. GOODCHAP'S report on the tramways with almost as much interest as they did his larger and more important report on the railways. So far as it is a fiscal matter the general railway system interests every taxpayer, but so far as the railways afford transit convenience, they interest the country people more than the people of the metropolis. The tramways constitute the fractional part of the general transit facility which the Government has granted to the people of the city and the suburbs. The amount invested is not very large in proportion to the density of the metropolitan population, but it has probably given a greater amount of convenience to a greater amount of people than any similar investment of the same kind that the Government has made. Up to the close of 1881, which is the date to which the report gives the particulars, the gross expenditure had not exceeded £170,000, and during that period nine million different tickets had been collected, each ticket representing a separate journey, and the capital originally invested is not worn out but still remains very largely represented. The extent to which the tramways are a convenience is, of course, exactly represented by the use that is made of them, and there is no other expenditure that the Government has made that gives a convenience proportionate to the amount spent. There are a great many objections to be made to steam tramways on the common roads. The objections lie on the surface, and nobody can avoid seeing them; but what the public also cannot avoid is making use of the tramcars. They are such an undeniable convenience that there would be a general outcry if it were proposed to abandon them. The transit facilities of Sydney were utterly below the needs of the population, and the patronage extended to the tramcars is some measure of the want that existed.

Nor have the financial results so far been unsatisfactory. We do not, it is true, get the same brilliant return that we had at first. The original line from Hunter-street to Redfern carried the whole of the Exhibition traffic, and the income was very large in proportion to the outlay. That could not possibly be kept up when we had to deal with the ordinary business, to multiply the number of lines, and to increase the amount invested. Still the interest for 1881 was over six per cent., and that is equal to the return of all but the most profitable of our railway lines. The return would have been over 10 per cent. if it had not been that the original section had to be relaid with steel rails, the soft iron rails put down in the first instance not being equal to the strain on them.

The report comes late in the year, and mentions the fact of extensions, as to the working of which we must wait for the next report. As some of these go to the less populous suburbs, we cannot expect them to be so productive as the lines first opened, and those going out to the west will have increased the capital account by the large amount due for the tramway share of the wood-paving in Parramatta-street. The great convenience which the tramways offer to the travelling public are such as to make nearly every suburb desire one, and it will be necessary to watch the returns closely to try and find out where the remunerative point ceases. In the next report we shall expect to see a classified return showing the traffic on each separate line, and from that we may be able to form an approximate estimate as to the relative profit of each route. We must, however, in fairness apply the same principle to tramways that we have to railways, and not expect new lines to pay at the very start, although there is not the same room for the development of traffic by a tramway that there is by a railway that is opening up new country. To some extent a tramway to a suburb may stimulate new building in virtue of the advantages it offers; but when tramways go to all the suburbs, this convenience will be distributed, and will not be specially noticeable in any one locality. In the main, tramways have not done so much to create a traffic, as to gather up what is already waiting, so that a tramway will show relatively better at a first start than a country railway will.

Amongst the new lines opened this year is that from Campbelltown to Camden, and therefore the report which deals with last year gives us no particulars as to its success or otherwise. A great deal of interest attaches to this line, because it was avowedly a pioneer experiment. It was an attempt to ascertain whether branch lines from stations to townships not far off were likely to prove remunerative, and when the MINISTER FOR WORKS propounds his railway policy he will probably be prepared with some detailed information on this point. That policy has been briefly indicated in the Budget Speech; and by the evident desire of the MINISTER to experiment now in light railways, we should judge that road railways—for that is what rural tramways really are—do not seem to him to have special advantages. The policy indicated is, however, a mixed one, as we are to have some new tramways as well as some light railways. The country will expect to be clearly informed as to the principle on which the MINISTER goes in making this distinction. When is a tramway preferable to a light railway, and why?

The COMMISSIONER could not, of course, omit reference to the unfortunate fatalities which have attended the development of the tramway system. He comforts himself by thinking that the Department has not been blamed for more than one accident, and even then the jury acquitted the man accused. Nor does he think that the number of accidents compares unfavourably with those that occur in the large cities of Europe as the result of vehicular traffic. In spite of these statistics, however, we hope to see the number of accidents greatly diminished. The public is certainly getting more used to tramways, and more on its guard against the special dangers connected with them, and the officers of the Department are getting more used to their business. All these circumstances are favourable, but at the same time the system is one which never can be free from danger, and which will always necessitate prudence and vigilance on the part of passengers, as well as on the part of the officials.

With a considerable degree of pathos the wharf labourers now on strike have given their version of their own case; and with some passion, mingled with reason, the masters have given theirs; but the public, having carefully considered both stories, feel that they offer a very inadequate justification for present conditions. The masters have said: You earn occasionally four or five or six pounds per week, and we cannot recognise your claim for higher rates; nor, did we recognise, could we satisfy it, as our own arrangements are made upon the basis of present rates. The men reply: We do not average more than three and a-half days per week during the wool season, and two and a-half days per week through the winter; we are many of us married, with families; we pay extortionate rents for our houses, and very frequently, but for the assistance we receive from our wives, we could not meet our weekly expenses. There is an ad misericordiam strain about all this, which does not become well-dressed men parading the streets with banners and bands, as in the masters' statement there is a lack of openness and candour which serves to mystify rather than inform impartial critics. To arrive at any proper judgment of the business it would be necessary to know the earnings of any one man, or of any dozen men, for a twelvemonth, so as to estimate what would be the average earnings of the average wharf labourer for a fixed period, and not what he can make in an exceptionally good week, or what he is compelled to subsist on through a slack or a rainy time. If any representative of either masters or men is really anxious to arrive at justice, why is not such a full and instructive statement made? Why vex the public with ex parte pleas, and stir up bitterness and vexation and strife by a belligerent attitude which must be fatal to any permanent or amicable settlement? The general feeling now is that a shilling an hour is a fair price for this very simplest kind of manual labour, and that a very insufficient cause has been shown for an all-round increase of 25 per cent.; but if the men can show that under present rates they are less favourably placed than other unskilled labourers of the colony, that the nature of their work necessitates their presence upon the wharfs whether employed or simply in waiting, and that they have no chance to supplement their incomes by work in other directions, then they may be sure that public sympathy will respond to a rational appeal. As yet, however, nothing of the sort has been shown. We have the garbled comments of partisans instead of the simple evidence of a trustworthy witness, or the equable summing up of a Judge; we see men pulling hither and thither, and saying here is right and there is right, but fail utterly to discern any man on any side pointing calmly to a series of carefully collected facts and saying, there is the truth.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE defeat of the Parkes-Robertson Ministry, and the rejection of the Crown Lands Acts Amendment and Consolidation Bill, by the Legislative Assembly, formed the chief topic of discussion in the clubs of the city last night, and in other places where persons were congregated, and to which the news had spread. Our Parliamentary report furnishes the particulars of the somewhat unexpected proceedings in the Assembly chamber. It may be added that nothing is yet known as to the course which the Ministry will pursue—whether it will resign, or ask his Excellency the Governor for a dissolution. A Cabinet meeting will, we believe, be held to-day, at which the political crisis will be discussed.

SOME evidence given by Sulieman Bey at the trial of Arabi implicates the prisoner in regard to the attempt to destroy Alexandria by fire after the bombardment. Sulieman declares that he received orders from Arabi to fire the city, and take advantage of the rising and murder the Khedive. It would seem that the Porte has been making another move in the direction of sending a commission to Egypt, for Earl Granville has had to reiterate his objections to any such proceeding.

THE Right Rev. Edward Parry, Suffragan Bishop of Dover, is not likely to accept the invitation to become Bishop of Sydney and Metropolitan of Australia. This is stated by one of our cablegrams of this morning.

GENERAL items of news by cablegram announce that the second of Mr. Gladstone's cloture proposals has been agreed to without division. The prospects of a bill being passed by our Parliament for the inscription of New South Wales stock has improved the market for New South Wales securities. The floating of a South Australian loan has been postponed pending the passing of the Inscription Act by that colony. The Sultan's income from Cyprus has been stopped. The trial of the murderers of the Joyce family is proceeding at Dublin.

THE Legislative Council last night, after disposing of some notices of motion by Mr. Stewart, and some other matters, proceeded seriatim with the Criminal Law Amendment Bill. When the clause which proposed that accused persons might be defended by attorneys or agents, as well as by counsel, was submitted, a discussion took place as to whether it was desirable that attorneys or agents should in such a case be placed on the same footing as counsel, and ultimately an amendment was moved to omit the word "attorney." Before this was disposed of, the Postmaster-General announced that in consequence of the decision arrived at in the Legislative Assembly, the Government did not intend to proceed with any more business at present. The Chairman of Committees accordingly left the chair and obtained leave to sit again, and the House then adjourned until Wednesday next.

PREVIOUS to the resumption of the debate on the second reading of the Land Bill, in the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Sir John Robertson laid on the table a very clearly lithographed and useful map, corrected up to the month of October, showing the various counties into which the colony is divided, and the quantity of land alienated in each, distinguishing between lands alienated under the old Orders in Council, by auction sale and after auction, conditional purchase, and improvement purchase. Reserved lands including gold-fields are also shown, and Church and School lands are indicated.

MR. LACKEY stated in the Assembly last night that the reason that a waiting-room for tramway passengers had not been erected near the entrance to Moore Park was that the only site considered to be suitable was in the hands of the Corporation, and that body declined to allow it to be used for the purpose.

MR. PILCHER has introduced a bill into the Legislative Assembly to make further provision for the law respecting the procedure and practice of the Supreme Court in its common law jurisdiction. The bill prescribes the practice to be followed in regard to interpleaders, discovery, striking out appearances, partners, foreign attachment, and bills of sale.

THE English mail per P. and O. steamer Kaisar-i-Hind arrived overland from Melbourne yesterday morning, and was delivered from the General Post Office at 9 a.m. The news she brings is to the 6th October, one week later than that brought by the Garonne. In another page we publish some English and Foreign intelligence brought by the Kaisar-i-Hind.

FROM a return printed by order of the Legislative Assembly, it appears that the annual value of the imports at Moama, for the five years from 1877 to 1881 inclusive, was £825,208, £625,848, £427,723, £461,279, and £571,135. The annual value of exports during the same period, was £1,226,504, £844,624, £941,700, £1,025,776, and £855,748. The amount of Customs' revenue collected at Deniliquin, for the same five years, was £24,712, £20,827, £18,070, £17,985, and £21,287.

THE following is a copy of the memo. addressed by Mr. W. W. Stephen, Under-Secretary for Lands, on the 22nd May, 1872, to the Crown Lands Agent at Newcastle, instructing him to accept applications for conditional purchases not made in person:—"In case of doubt on the part of the land agent, Newcastle, as to legality of accepting applications for mining conditional purchases from an agent, instead of from the applicant in person, he is hereby informed that it has been held that mining conditional purchases may be made by agents for the actual purchaser. He will therefore accept any such applications which may be tendered to him by agents.—W. W. STEPHEN."

WE understand that some modifications of the regulations in connection with the examination of teachers under the Department of Public Instruction have just been framed by the Minister. It is not intended in any way to lower the standard of efficiency, but to afford an extra chance to those teachers who pass well in the majority of subjects, but are unfortunate enough to fail in a few. For instance, candidates for class 1 who have failed in not more than four subjects will be allowed a supplementary examination in those subjects only in which they have failed; and candidates for class 2 who have failed in not more than two subjects will be allowed a similar privilege. In all cases teachers will be required to present themselves for these supplementary examinations within six months from the date of failure. Candidates for the first and second classes who have passed the literary subjects satisfactorily, but who have failed in practical skill, will be accorded their classification provided they obtain within two years a certificate that their practical skill has reached the prescribed standard. These regulations will come into force at the examinations that will take place next month, and they will have a retrospective effect with regard to those teachers who failed at the examinations in December and June last to an extent not greater than mentioned above.

FOR the vacant seat in the Senate of the University of Sydney, Dr. Henry Norman M'Laurin has been nominated by the Rev. W. Moore White, LL.D., and Sir Patrick Jennings, by Mr. Christopher Rolleston, C.M.G.

WE regret to hear of the sudden death, in an apoplectic fit, of Mr. Robert M'Kellar, an old and trusted officer in the department of the Colonial Architect, Mr. M'Kellar was one of the foremen of works in connection with the furniture department, and had been in the service of the Government for many years. A few days ago he was attending to his duties, apparently in perfect health, but presently complained of a pain in the head. He went home, and was about to take a cup of tea, when he suddenly fell down in a fit and expired shortly afterwards.

NEARLY 100 ladies and gentlemen visited the immigration depot, Hyde Park, yesterday at noon, or soon afterwards, with the view of hiring as domestic servants some of the single women who immigrated to the colony by the ship Baan; but of the 85 girls brought out here 84 had been removed by their friends, so that the numerous would-be employers found only one girl for hire, and after a great deal of talk and competitive temptation one of the ladies secured this young person at a weekly wage of 10s. The disappointed visitors were comforted by the matron, Mrs. Hicks, with the assurance that in a fortnight another batch of immigrants would arrive, and that then they might obtain what they sought.

THE Australian cricketers are expected to reach Sydney on Saturday morning. They will be met by the committee of the association and driven to their quarters at the Metropolitan Hotel. In the afternoon they will visit the Association Ground to witness the cup match in progress. The banquet will take place at the Exchange Hotel on Tuesday, 21st instant, when the chair will be taken by Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., senior vice-president of the association.

TWO enormous blocks of stone, each weighing 25 tons, have been recently delivered at the General Post Office. These blocks will be placed in the centre of the front to the new street, and upon them the Royal Arms will be carved. The stone came from the Pyrmont quarries.

YESTERDAY morning negotiations were again in progress with a view to mediation between the wharf labourers and their employers. The men's committee having been authorised by the men to act as they might think best towards bringing about a satisfactory settlement of the strike, three members of the committee were engaged almost the whole of the morning in an interview with the gentleman who appears to be endeavouring to act as mediator. None of the men went to work yesterday. Most of them were assembled outside Pries' Hotel, at the corner of George and Argyle streets, for the purpose of receiving their cards of membership in the new union into which they have formed themselves. The crew of the steamship Garonne were busy again yesterday discharging cargo, and the P. and O. Co.'s steamship Peshawur was being discharged by her crew, assisted by some men who are permanently employed by Messrs. Flood and Co. and Alfred Lamb and Co. The employers' committee met yesterday morning, but did no business of any importance.

THE Finance Committee of the Sydney Municipal Council met at the Town Hall yesterday, when the Mayor occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance of aldermen. Alderman Fowler presented a petition for improvements to Miller-street. Accounts for works amounting to £1658 2s. 3d. were examined, and it was authorised that they be paid. A letter was received from Mr. G. A. Morrell, soliciting on behalf of the Brush Electric Light Company permission to erect at Fort Macquarie, upon a site granted by the Government, an isolated building of wood and iron, 50 by 20 feet, for the protection of an engine. The application was granted. An application to have the survey fees in connection with the Goodenough Naval Home billiard-room remitted, was received. A refusal was ordered, and it was also authorised that inquiries be made to ascertain whether the building was or was not on part of a public street. Adam Sharp applied that the penalties imposed upon him in connection with works he had performed in Bunn and Murray streets might be remitted, as the delay in carrying out his contracts was unavoidable. It was resolved, as there were thought to be mitigating circumstances in the case, to accede to the application. The proposal to erect the statue of the late Mr. Mort in the Macquarie-place reserve was approved of, and it was also resolved, on the motion of Alderman Kippax, to purchase a piece of land requisite for the proper drainage of Phelps and Marshall streets. Some correspondence was also read, but it was not of an important character. The following is a statement of the financial position of the Council for the week ending 15th November:—Balances: City Fund, Dr., £20,210 5s. 10d.; Water Fund, Cr., £39,304 13s. 3d.; Sewerage Fund, Cr., £10,598 10s. 5d.; Sydney Common Fund, Dr., £10,298 12s. 9d.; Cattle Sale Yards, Cr., £13,008 5s. 4d.; Town Hall Loan Fund, Dr., £886 0s. 10d.; Bank Balances, Dr., £40,304 19s. 5d.—Cr., £68,911 15s.; Town Hall Loan Fund, Dr., £886 0s. 10d.; Sydney Common Fund, Dr., £10,298 12s. 9d.; Cattle Sale Yards, Cr., £13,008 5s. 4d.; Town Hall Loan Fund, Dr., £886 0s. 10d.; Bank Balances, Dr., £40,304 19s. 5d.—Cr., £68,911 15s.; Town Hall Loan Fund, Cr., £75,000; Sinking Fund, Cattle Saleyards, Cr., £315 5s.; Sinking Fund, Cattle Saleyards, Invested, Cr., £2000; Sinking Fund, Town Hall Loan, Cr., £345 14s. 4d.; Sinking Fund, Town Hall Loan, invested, Cr., £7,000.

THE hearing, in Vice-Admiralty, of the collision case of the Duckenfield was resumed yesterday morning, and concluded. Judgment was reserved. Mr. Justice Windeyer sat in the afternoon for the hearing of causes. Shervey v. Lawson, an action for trespass to land at Caperee, was part heard. Their Honors Sir James Martin, C.J., Mr. Justice Faucett, and Sir George Innes continued the hearing of Equity appeals yesterday. In the suit of Sandeman v. Walker the Court reversed a decision of the Primary Judge, and held that a deed of settlement executed by a man was void, whether he had creditors or not at the time of execution. The defendant Quigley had settled his house and furniture on his wife before entering upon two trespass actions, in both of which he was defeated. He was made insolvent upon non-payment of costs, and the official assignee, by the decision of the Full Court, has now succeeded in upsetting the deed. Costs were given pro formâ against the defendant Quigley. In consequence of a bereavement in his family, his Honor the Primary Judge did not sit in Equity yesterday.

A PUBLIC meeting was held last night in the Wesleyan Centenary Church, York-street, to welcome the eleven ministers whose arrival in the colony by the Peshawur was mentioned in yesterday's issue. The church was crowded wherever sitting room could be found, both above and below. The Rev. George Martin, President of the New South Wales and Queensland Conference, occupied the chair, and on the platform were the Revs. J. Jefferis (Congregational), G. Hurst, J. H. Fletcher, W. Kelynack, D.D., G. Woolnough, M.A., S. Wilkinson, J. Oram, W. Clarke, W. E. Bourne, J. S. Warner, H. Mack, W. Curnow, G. Lane, J. Caldwell, J. Clifton, J. W. Brown, Graham, W. G. Taylor, F. Firth; also the newly arrived ministers, the Revs. Charles Preston, B.A., of Oxford, J. A. Jeffreys, A. Cooper, C. E. Butler, James, J. Bryant, J. Hulme, J. Scott, W. H. Harrison, W. Lucas, and F. Boyer; and of laymen were—Messrs. Henson, M.L.A., E. Vickery, B. James, jun., P. P. Fletcher, Hogben, and others. After devotional engagements, the Rev. G. Woolnough introduced to the President the 11 newly arrived ministers, and said that the inception of the movement was due to the Rev. G. Hurst, who also contributed a handsome sum towards the expenses it involved, and referred to the valuable services of Mr. Tait in the selection and engagement of the ministers, and to the assistance rendered in England by the Rev. Dr. Osborn, who, among all the ministers in England, seemed to be almost the only one who knew anything about Australia, and is deeply interested in all that affects the Wesleyan Church in these colonies. The President said that he was exceedingly pleased to give a hearty welcome to the brethren as fellow-labourers in the Methodist Church of New South Wales and Queensland, and said that he and many others on the platform remembered the time when they stood in the same position in the beginning of their ministerial career in Australia, and none of them regretted the step which they then took, but gloried rather that they had been spared so long to labour. They would find here heads as clear and hearts as warm as those they had left behind, and whom they had been accustomed from their youth up to reverence and love. The Rev. George Hurst, on behalf of the ministers, and Mr. B. James, jun., on behalf of the laymen of the Wesleyan Church, gave the young men a hearty welcome. The Revs. C. Preston, W. Lucas, James, and Boyer addressed the meeting; after which, the Rev. J. Jefferis, Congregationalist, on behalf of his Church and people, welcomed the newly arrived ministers, and wished them God speed in their work. A collection was taken up on behalf of the Church Sustentation Society, and with a doxology and a benediction the meeting was terminated.

THE Western Suburbs Horticultural Society held a flower show yesterday at the Ashfield School of Arts, and the visitors to it in the evening were entertained by an amateur concert. A full report upon the exhibits is given in another column.

MR. JAMES WADDELL, who has been located at Copeland as manager of the A. J. S. Bank for the past three years, and who is leaving the district, has been presented by the townspeople with a valuable gold watch as a token of the esteem and respect which he has earned from the whole community.

WE notice by late English papers that the adoption of steam power on tramways seems to be becoming more general. At the last half-yearly meeting of the Leeds Tramway Company it was stated that engines were used on one of their routes, and caused a saving of 25 per cent. as compared with horse power. It was stated that the company intended to extend the use of steam power to other routes.

A TELEGRAM received from Mr. Palmerston, who is exploring the coast range between Herberton and the sea, in Queensland, states that he passed one mountain 4500 feet high.

REFERRING to the continued evasion of the spirit of the Licensing Act by persons who travel five miles on Sunday for the express purpose of qualifying themselves to drink, "X" describes the practices of the larrikin class at Manly and Botany as highly objectionable, and urges that the distance to constitute a traveller should be altered from five to ten miles.

ATTENTION is drawn by a correspondent residing at Surry Hills to the ruthless destruction of native song and other birds, which goes on in spite of the close season. He states that he has seen numbers of birds offered for sale in Sydney since the close season commenced, many of them being nestlings of this year.

YESTERDAY morning considerable interruption took place in the traffic through that portion of Market-street in which extensive building operations are now taking place, in consequence of a block caused by the carts containing earth and bricks which were at right angles to the road, the cab stand on the opposite side, and a huge dray carrying a toppling pyramid of wool. The latter was secured by one comparatively slender cord passing from the tail to the head of the cart, and persons passing gave it as wide a berth as possible. If the City Council were to give a little attention to such practical work as regulating the weight of loads, the width of drays, the numeration of houses, and the systematic nomenclature of streets, they would confer a great favour on citizens. Within a short distance of the Town Hall there are seven Campbell streets; many of the houses have no numbers, and the same number in many streets is affixed on four or five houses. Very serious consequences occasionally result from the latter confusing circumstance. In Abercrombie-street, or place (for it is known by both names), three medical men were some time ago in search of the same patient, who, however, died long before one of them could discover her residence, in consequence of the confused numeration of the houses.

IN cases of breach of the Public Instruction Act brought before the police courts, it is frequently urged in defence by parents that they are unaware of the absence of their children from school, not having been informed of the fact by the teachers. Some time ago, Mr. Crane, S.M., in the Central Police Court, pointed out the necessity of teachers carrying out this portion of their duty, so that parents might be made aware of the truancy of their children, and be afforded an opportunity to correct it. It was stated in a case brought before the Central Police Court, in which a plea of ignorance of a child's absence from school by the lack of information from the teacher was put forward, that the Department of Education had lately taken steps to facilitate communication between teachers and parents in all cases of irregular attendance.

DURING the holding of an inquest yesterday afternoon by the City Coroner, one of the witnesses charged a member of the medical staff at the hospital with a gross neglect of duty. The witness remarked that he took the deceased, upon whom the inquest was being held, to the hospital yesterday morning, at about half-past 7 o'clock; and on presenting himself at the door of the institution the gatekeeper met him, and subsequently went inside to inform one of the doctors that his attendance was required in regard to the patient in question. About 10 minutes afterwards the medical gentleman presented himself; but, according to the statement of the witness, refused to look at the patient, who was then lying in a van, until all kinds of persuasions were thrown out to him to do so. Eventually he yielded, and the witness went on to state that he then merely probed the eyes, and remarked "Take him to the dead-house: what do you bring dead men here for?" The complainant added that it was his intention to bring the matter under the notice of the proper authorities. The coroner informed him that if he wished to see any notice taken of his complaint he would require to pursue that course.

A WIDOW named Elizabeth Murray, aged 38 years, who resided in a house at the rear of No. 84, Liverpool-street, was found yesterday morning lying underneath a water-tap in her yard apparently dead. She was removed to her house by two police constables, to whom the information of the matter was given, and subsequently the body was viewed by Dr. M'Donagh, who pronounced life to be quite extinct. There was a slight wound over the right temple, and it is presumed that the deceased fell at the tap whilst drawing water, as it was running on her when she was discovered.

AN accident occurred at Sander's quarry works, Pyrmont, at about 7 a.m. yesterday, by which a man named John Matthew, employed at the works, lost his life. The unfortunate man was assisting in the removal of some stone, when a large portion of it fell, and, striking him on the abdomen and thighs, he was knocked down and pinned to the ground. He was extricated from his horrible position as speedily as possible by some of the other workmen who witnessed the occurrence. They removed Matthew to the Sydney Hospital at once, but on arrival there life was pronounced to be quite extinct. The body was then taken to the morgue at Circular Quay.

A LITTLE boy named William King was admitted into the Hospital yesterday, suffering from some internal injuries caused by his having been run over by a cab in George-street. He was crossing the street at the time, and not noticing the vehicle, was knocked down, and run over before the driver could manage to bring his horse to a standstill.

A BRICKLAYER named Charles Thomas, aged 14 years, met with a fatal accident yesterday morning. He was working on some scaffolding at a house in course of erection in Clarence-street, and he accidentally fell to the ground, and died soon afterwards.

POLICE-CONSTABLE MEYERS, of Redfern station, brought a man named George Holland to the hospital last night, he having received some wounds on his breast which were said to have been inflicted by another man with a knife. The statement made by Holland regarding the matter was to the effect that he had had a quarrel with his assistant, together with some other men, and that they separated shortly afterwards, but Holland coming into contact again with the man, the latter took advantage of his presence in order to secure revenge, and stabbed him.

A YOUNG man stepped out of a special Waverley tram yesterday afternoon, opposite Crown-street. As no stoppage was made at this spot, the foolish young fellow fell sprawling, his face striking the near down rail. He must have sustained considerable injury through his foolhardiness. Most of the motors on this line are now supplied with sand-boxes with pipes leading close to the rails, the result being that few trams are now stuck-up in Oxford-street. It has been suggested that in new tram carriages the lower part of the doors should be so arranged as to be opened and closed simultaneously by the guards, the upper part only being left to be closed at the discretion of passengers.

DEFEAT OF THE GOVERNMENT.

THE LAND BILL REJECTED.

The discussion on the second reading of the Land Bill was resumed in the Legislative Assembly yesterday by Sir Patrick Jennings, who was followed by Mr. Lackey and Mr. M'Elhone. At the conclusion of the speech of the last-named hon. member, Mr. Hungerford made a few remarks in explanation. Then ensued an ominous silence for a few moments, after which Mr. Speaker rose to put the question, greatly to the surprise of the general public in the galleries, who had expected the discussion to last for some days at the very least. Mr. Speaker had just got as far as "Those of the contrary opinion say 'No,'" when Mr. Melville rose to his feet, evidently prepared with an oration. Several hon. gentlemen on the Opposition side at once pounced upon the hon. member, and persuaded him to resume his seat. After another short but anxious pause, Mr. Speaker proceeded with his formula, "I think the ayes have it." A burst of "The noes have it" came vociferously from the Opposition members, and Mr. Speaker calmly gave the order, "Ring the bell, Sergeant." This order was obeyed, and members came trooping in from all quarters; but it was evident from the first that the Opposition had secured the right moment for a division, and had a majority. There was silence while the Speaker repeated the formal question and nominated the tellers but the triumphant Opposition could not restrain their satisfaction at finding themselves in so large a majority, and their gleeful congratulations caused a somewhat unseemly burr all the time that the names were being recorded. At length the tellers completed their task, and handed the lists to the Speaker, who in announcing the result had only got as far as "Ayes 33, Noes 43," when the jubilant Opposition burst into a paean of cheering, which lasted for several minutes. Mr. Speaker for some time endeavoured in vain to recall the House to a sense of its dignity, and when at last he obtained a hearing he lectured hon. members for their disorderly conduct, and then completed the formal announcement with the words—"The question is resolved in the negative." At this the cheers were renewed, and continued unchecked for some minutes. Sir Henry Parkes then moved the adjournment of the House until Tuesday next. It will be seen that only 76 members voted out of 107—there being at present one vacancy. The Opposition side claimed that at least 10 members who were absent would have voted with them, besides others from whom they had no positive promise, but who had privately expressed opinions adverse to the Land Bill. There were four members who paired off—Messrs. Cameron and Roseby in favour of the bill, and Messrs. Fletcher and O'Connor against. The Opposition with the 43 who voted for them, the two pairs, and the 10 absent supporters, would have mustered 55 in all—which is more than half the total number in the House.

In political circles last night, opinions were divided as to whether the Government would resign or appeal to the country. It was more generally thought that the Government would resign, and thus throw upon the Opposition the responsibility of the vote.

THOUSANDS of both sexes who would shudder at the thought of tasting the adulterated liquors in common use take Wolfe's Schnapps medicinally as a remedy for debility, indigestion, and like ailments.—[ADVT.]

The large sample tramcar ordered by the Omnibus Company was on board the Gulf of Finland, recently wrecked in the Red Sea.

The first of the reports of Messrs. Gordon and Black on irrigation as applied to the Northern Plains was presented to the Assembly this evening. It deals exhaustively with the subject of irrigation, and gives a quantity of information showing the volume of water required for irrigation under various circumstances and climatic conditions and for various crops. Messrs. Gordon and Black consider, even with an abundant water supply, the extent of irrigation that could be carried on by the present population in the Northern Plains would be very limited. They express a belief that too sanguine views of the profitableness of irrigation are often entertained from an under-estimate of the cost, or an over-estimate of the results, arising from want of information or due consideration of conditions essential to success.

A meeting of the Pilot Board was held to-day, to consider the collision between the steamer Decima and the barque Alcestis, in the Yarra, on the 12th instant. The Decima went aground at Humbug Reach; the Alcestis was being towed up, and ran into her. The board found the mishap was purely accidental, and no blame was attached to anyone.

A boy named Fidelle has been dangerously injured at Daylesford by working a windlass with another lad. The latter let the handle slip, and Fidelle was knocked into the shaft. He fell into a well with a depth of 60 feet, and several of his ribs are fractured, with internal injuries.

The total number of voters for the Legislative Council, according to a return presented to the Assembly, is 98,755, of whom 97,622 are local ratepayers. Prior to the passing of the Reform Act, the Council franchise numbered only 31,096, including 30,608 ratepayers.

The time for receiving nominations for the Legislative Council elections expired this evening. The following nominations were made:—Melbourne Province (one seat): Cornelius J. Ham, George S. A severe shock of earthquake is reported to have been felt at Woods Point at quarter past 10 this evening. The direction was S.S.E. It is stated to have been by far the heaviest shock ever felt in the district, dislodging bottles, crockery, &c., from shelves. A similar report has been received from Mansfield and Jamieson. The earthquake caused considerable alarm to residents. Some persons standing in the road at Jamieson were almost thrown off their feet. The mailman from Wood's Point to Jamieson was thrown on his horse's neck.

It was stated in the Assembly to-day that a reply had been received from the Queen, through the Governor, to the address congratulating her Majesty on the success of British arms in Egypt. The Queen expresses much gratification at the loyalty displayed.

In the Presbyterian Assembly to-day, four hours of the morning and afternoon sittings were occupied in a discussion on an application by the Rev. A. F. Knox for admission into the Church. The discussion was conducted with closed doors. It was ultimately decided that Mr. Knox be admitted to the ministry of the Church on certain conditions. At the evening sitting the deputies reported the result of their visit to Sydney and Queensland. The report of the committee on the union of Presbyterian churches in Australia was submitted by the Rev. Dr. Nish, and after several addresses were delivered in favour of the proposed union, the report was unanimously adopted. The visitors to the Presbytery from the other colonies are to be entertained by the Victorian members at an excursion to Fernshaw, on Saturday.

A boy named Boucher, who has a mother residing at Deniliquin, was found drowned in the Gunbower Creek, yesterday. He was engaged in conveying wood across the creek in a boat, and it is supposed he either fell or jumped into the creek upon seeing a snake in the boat, as the reptile was found and despatched by a party who went in search of the boy.

The match between the Hon. Ivo Bligh's team and an eleven of Victoria commences at noon to-morrow, on the Melbourne Cricket Ground, which is in splendid condition. A half-holiday has been proclaimed.

At the Church of England Congress to-day, the subjects of temperance and total abstinence were considered, also the question of Sunday observance. To-morrow an interesting discussion is expected on the subject of the duty of the Church of England in regard to the Education Act of Victoria, which comes on for discussion, and upon which Mr. Justice Higinbotham will read a paper. Several members of the congress were present at an organ performance at the Town Hall to-day, by invitation of the Mayor.

The clergy of the Melbourne diocese have invited the visiting clergy to breakfast at 9 o'clock to-morrow at the Coffee Palace.

In order to obviate the possibility of the English team being weakened through the inability of any of the members to play in the match against the Australian Eleven, the Hon. Ivo Bligh has requested the Melbourne Cricket Club to telegraph for M. P. Lucas, the famous Sussex batsman, to come out to take part in these matches. At a special meeting of the committee this evening it was decided to comply with the request. A cablegram was accordingly sent to Lucas, who is expected before the end of December.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, THURSDAY.

Mr. Guthrie, a member of the hospital committee, who recently made a charge of gross neglect against Dr. Kesteven, the hospital surgeon, has now withdrawn the charge, stating that he was misinformed when he wrote the letter. At the meeting of the hospital committee yesterday a resolution was passed to the effect that there was nothing in the evidence taken at the official inquiry concerning the death of Kingston to show any neglect on the part of the doctor.

Mr. Archer, Colonial Treasurer, leaves on a trip to the north on Wednesday, calling at five ports from Rockhampton to Cooktown. It is understood that Mr. Archer's visit is mainly in the interests of the Harbours and Rivers Department. He will spend some time at the Herbert River to ascertain the best site for wharfs.

The contract for the Auckland Point jetty at Gladstone has been let to Thomas Green, of Ipswich, at £15,000. He will give 25 feet water at low tide, and have it completed in 18 months.

The first inspection of Volunteer Artillery and Engineers under the new Act was held yesternight. 155 men mustered.

A lunatic named Jas. Neilson escaped from Woogaroo Asylum yesterday morning, and has not yet been captured.

The mail steamer Compta came up the river to the wharfs to-day, and passed through the new cutting of the bar, drawing 16 feet.

The Cingalese, per Devonshire, were landed at Mackay yesterday.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, THURSDAY.

Harrold Bros. have received a telegram stating that serious damage has been done to the cargo of the Gulf of Finland, but considerable salvage will be forwarded at the first opportunity.

A deputation to-day urged the Commissioner of Works to reduce the railway charges on fat stock from 8d. to 6d. per truck, and that store cattle be taken up at half-price. Mr. Ramsay gave a favourable reply, stating that in revising the tariff he intended to take the New South Wales tariff as a model.

The Queen has approved of Messrs. G. C. Hawker, W. H. Bundy, and T. Playford retaining the title of Honorable.

The Vice-Admiralty Court has ordered the seamen's wages to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale of the barque Fraybentos, previously directed to be sold.

Rich specimens of copper, lode straight down 10 feet, have been shown at Port Augusta from the Victory mine near there.

The case of White v. the Adelaide Corporation was continued to-day. The witnesses for the defence showed that during the last 25 or 30 years the River Torrens had often been dry between Hindmarsh and plaintiff's property, the Reed Beds. Since the erection of the dam the supply of water to persons below had been more plentiful and regular.

A bush fire has occurred at Mount Brown Forest Reserve, near Quorn, to-day, and destroyed grass and timber on between 400 and 500 acres.

The president of the Marine Board to-day reported that deepening operations at Port Adelaide are so far complete that at the inner bar of the nearest lighthouse there is no less than 18 feet of water for a width of 150 feet. Hopes are entertained that in a couple of months there will be water of the same depth as far as North Arm, giving 18 feet to the wharfs at Port Adelaide, in June next. It transpired that the material rejected by the Marine Board has been now taken at a reduction of 5s. per ton, M'Lean Brothers, Rigg, and Co. being agreeable.

The majority of the men on the Nairne railway strike are willing to return to work on Thursday, if afforded sufficient protection. It is not certain whether that can be done yet, and the police not having returned from Bridgewater indicates that things are not satisfactory.

At the United Congregational Bazaar, the receipts on Thursday were £125.

The men working at Little Hampton, cutting on the third section, returned to work this morning at 9 o'clock, when some of those on strike tried to intimidate, but Walker, one of the contractors, threatened to send for the police and give the offenders in charge if they did not desist and leave. No interference is made now. All is quiet now; men on the third section are determined not to strike.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

PERTH, THURSDAY.

A deputation waited upon the Governor yesterday, to urge the necessity of declaring ports at the mouths of the Fortescue and Ashburton rivers.

Over 25,000,000 acres of land in the Eucla district paid rent for the last month. Of this more than half was by A. R. Wallis, of Melbourne, and over 5,000,000 by A. Canning, of Sydney.

NEW ZEALAND.

WELLINGTON, THURSDAY.

The late rains have done the crops great good. They are looking splendid through the south.

Bishop Luck had a great reception at Auckland. The Anglican bishop sent him a splendid bouquet.

PARLIAMENT OF VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, THURSDAY.

In the Assembly to-day, Sir B. O'Loghlen, immediately the House met, announced that Ministers, having given serious consideration to the views expressed by hon. members in regard to the Loan Conversion Bill, recognised that it was most desirable to provoke a political issue on any other point. A crisis might occur; but disagreement in regard to finance would damage the credit of the colony. Ministers, realising the critical nature of the position, had resolved to sacrifice their own convictions and adopt the scheme which seemed to have found favour with the House. The Premier, therefore, without notice, submitted a motion authorising the division of the Loans Conversion Bill into three parts. One bill is to provide for floating a loan of £3,800,000, about July next, to meet the debentures falling due shortly afterwards; the second bill is to give purchasers of the new loan the option of taking debentures or inscribed stock at 4 per cent.; the third bill provides for floating a local loan of £170,000 to pay off the Hobson's Bay and Bendigo water works debentures falling due. The Premier's statement gave general satisfaction. Mr. Berry, who seconded the motion, said it was as welcome as it was unexpected. He concurred in the opinion that a political crisis in regard to the finances was most undesirable, and expressed his belief that the new bills would speedily be passed. Other members spoke to a similar effect. The motion was carried. The three bills are to be proceeded with on Tuesday. Sir Bryan O'Loghlen requested the House to pass the Supply Bill through all its stages to carry on the public Departments until November or December, the amount required being £600,000. Mr. Berry, on behalf of the Opposition, objected to some items of expenditure, which members desired to discuss. Sir Bryan O'Loghlen therefore held the bill over until Tuesday. The remainder of the sitting was occupied in a discussion on the Grampian stone and the new Parliament Houses.

ADELAIDE, THURSDAY.

In the Legislative Council to-day, the House passed a motion in favour of an Adelaide Exhibition, after a short debate, without division. After passing the exhibition motion, a motion was considered for a Loan Bill, and after some discussion, mostly on details, it was passed through all its stages. The rejected Distillation Bill is also a measure providing for licensing refreshment rooms in railway stations.

In the Assembly a resolution in favour of an Exhibition in 1886 was carried. The Chief Secretary said he expected the show would be carried out handsomely for the net cost of £100,000, including a permanent building available for future local shows. The estimated cost is £50,000. The only strong objection was raised by Mr. Tomkinson, who urged delay in deciding the matter. Mr. Ward advocated an arrangement with New South Wales, by which that colony might follow with a Centenary Exhibition in 1887. The motion was carried without division. The House occupied a great part of the afternoon considering amendments by the Council in various bills. Mr. Symons' bill to remedy the difficulty of the constitution of courts in marine inquiry was rejected by a majority of four. The Government are contending that rules to be made by the Judges are sufficient to prevent any breakdown such as that in the case of the engineer of the tug Stanley. Nearly all the business of the session is now completed, only a little clearing-up being left for to-morrow. Prorogation expected about 5 o'clock.

MINING INTELLIGENCE.

COPELAND, THURSDAY.

The Mechanics' Company are now carting upwards of 200 tons of quartz to the Rainbow battery. It is expected to yield a handsome dividend. No. 1 Centennial are raising very good stone. No. 1 East Mountain Maid are erecting a whim, and a few weeks will again see this claim in full operation. Some first-class specimens from No. 1 North Hidden Treasure were exhibited to-day. The Kerriput Gold-mining Company have purchased Vivian's machine, and are arranging to start operations on an extended scale.

Messrs. Melhado and Curtis report that the yield mentioned in yesterday's paper from the Band and Albion, for the fortnight, as 255oz., was a mistake. It should have been from the Working Miners' United.

The manager of the Belmore Gold-mining Company, limited, Ophir, reports the following, as the assay returns from the Mint, of the sample ton of seconds, representing 25 to 30 tons at grass:—The weight of quartz operated upon was 20cwt. 2qrs. 26lb. The yield of standard gold, 13oz. 61-100, being at the rate of 13oz. 3dwts. per ton.

The following is a return of tin ore received at Newcastle and Morpeth for the week ending November 11:—Uralla to Newcastle, 23 tons 12cwt.; Tamworth to Newcastle, 14 tons 1cwt. 3qrs.; Uralla to Morpeth, 35 tons 11cwt. 3qrs.; Tamworth to Morpeth, 15 tons 3cwt.: total, 88 tons 8cwt. 2qrs.

OVERLAND PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

ALBURY, THURSDAY.

The following passed through to-day:—

For Sydney: Mr. and Mrs. W. Roslyn, Mrs. Burrows, Miss M'Donnell, Messrs. J. Carlaw, C. J. H. Dickson, C. S. Wilkinson, J. S. M. Thomson, F. A. Barnard, P. W. Warburton, W. M'Donnell, M. A. Farmer, J. A. Craig, G. C. Layton, J. Barter, B. Josephs.

For Melbourne: Mr. and Mrs. G. Johnson, Miss Fenwick, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Stone, Mr. and Mrs. W. Edwards, Miss Edwards, Mrs. Judd, Mrs. Allen, Messrs. J. Griffiths, C. M'Cormick, Hickman, F. Cutts, T. Sanders, A. B. Lakeley, J. Chisholm, W. Cameron, J. Thompson, J. Bromner, W. Banks, G. Heywood, H. Chapman, W. James, P. Lyons, J. Power, H. Strickland, G. Lilly, L. Spitzel, D. Johnson, E. C. Pearson, R. H. Carter, J. Gibson, H. Robinson, E. Hill, C. Maynard, J. T. Brailsford, O'Brien, Ridsdale, Burk, Stephen, Harrison, O'Connell, Ward, Willoughby, S. Brierley, and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. M'Kay.

AMUSEMENTS.

A highly successful social reunion was held on Wednesday evening last, in connection with St. Alban's Church, Five Dock. The proceedings commenced with a tea meeting, provided and presided over by the ladies of the district, held in a large bushhouse at the rear of the church, which was brilliantly lighted by chandeliers containing portable gas, kindly fixed gratuitously by Mr. J. Gardyne. A public meeting followed, held in the church, presided over by Mr. Russell Barton, M.L.A. The chairman introduced the Rev. Canon King, who advocated the claims of the Church Society. The Rev. J. D. Langley explained the work of the Church of England Loan Church and Parsonage Fund, and advised the people of Five Dock to avail themselves of its provisions. The Rev. Canon Moreton (incumbent of Burwood and Five Dock) exhaustively referred to church work in the two parishes, and was of opinion that the time would shortly come when Five Dock must be erected into a separate parish. Mr. John Dawson, of Burwood, also strongly advised the parishioners of Five Dock to look the matter fairly in the face, and at any rate make a commencement, so that, as population increased, Five Dock may be able to support its own clergyman. During the evening the ladies and gentlemen of St. Peter's (Woolloomooloo) choir rendered selections of sacred music, which were much appreciated. A collection was made, which was well responded to. The proceedings terminated with hearty votes of thanks to St. Peter's choir, the ladies and gentlemen of the committee, and the chairman.

The annual picnic of the Dairymen's Protection Society was held at Botany on Wednesday. At half-past 10 several well-filled omnibuses and a large number of private vehicles left the Burrangong Hotel, Haymarket, and after a pleasant drive arrived at the Sir Joseph Banks Pavilion, where an excellent lunch awaited the visitors, after which dancing commenced to the music of the Young Australian Band, and various sports were entered upon with zest. The foot-racing was most excellent. The silver cup for dairymen was won by T. Alderson; and the diamond gold studs, with Mr. F. Smith's special prize, a gold medal, for hop, step, and jump, fell to the lot of Burns. Several minor races were contested. At 2 o'clock dinner was laid out in Mr. Smith's usual style. The chair was occupied by Mr. Coward, president of the society, the vice-chair by Mr. A. O'Hara, secretary. After the usual loyal toasts had been honoured, the company returned to the amusements outside. At 5 o'clock tea, coffee, ice cream, &c., were supplied abundantly, and thoroughly enjoyed by all. Soon after 6 the return journey commenced, which was accomplished in safety after a most enjoyable day's pleasure.

COUNTRY NEWS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

NEWCASTLE, THURSDAY.

A counter petition against the incorporation of the Glebe junction and Burwood contains 122 signatures, no less than 72 of which are made by a cross.

A cablegram has been received announcing the death of Captain Miller, of the Bothwell Castle, from London to Newcastle. On account of his illness the vessel put in at Simons Bay, where he died on Tuesday last. The ship is proceeding on her voyage in charge of the chief officer.

At a meeting of the Wickham Council last night, it was agreed not to make an order for the purchase of land until the Commissioner for Railways authorised the erection of the bridge from Bullock Island to Wickham, on the south side of the railway line.

Another pitfall has taken place at Tighe's Hill, at the rear of the Rock of Hope hotel, Larmet, a brick building. The seam of coal had been worked by J. Williamson, under an allotment owned by M'Miller. No persons were injured.

ARMIDALE, THURSDAY.

Yesterday evening Messrs. Longsdale and Elliott's, builders, large two-storey workshop was struck by lightning in several places, splitting the large upright posts, and carrying portions of timber a long distance. The top floor was used as a workshop, the bottom being filled with dry pine, cedar, and other building materials. The shavings both top and bottom, were set on fire, and the contents were speedily in flames. Many willing hands, by great exertions, subdued the fire before any considerable damage was done. About 20 workmen had only left the shop a few minutes before the lightning. No previous indications of a storm had been seen when the lightning and thunder astonished every one. Only the one flash and peal of thunder occurred.

The strike on the railway has extended all along Proudfoot's contract to Glen Innes. About 200 navvies went in a body to the managers yesterday, who declined to accede to their unreasonable demands for reduction from nine to eight working hours. In addition to shillings per day increase in wages, it is thought that in a few days, when the men have spent all their money, they will be glad to return to work.

GRAFTON, THURSDAY.

It is reported that a diamond drill, forwarded by the Mines Department, to be employed in boring for water here, arrived by steamer to-day.

The crushing season is fast drawing to a termination. A number of mills will have finished next week. The showery weather which has prevailed during the past few weeks has started the cane into vigorous growth, which has the effect of so reducing its density as to make it useless for sugar manufacture. This more particularly applies to plant and annual cane.

Nine hundred and forty acres land were selected to-day in nine portions.

WILCANNIA, THURSDAY.

At the Quarter Sessions, before Judge Docker, John Dickenson was found guilty of shooting at Mrs. Carswell on the 14th May and sentenced to seven years. Dickenson and Mrs. Carswell were both formerly employed on Menamurtie station, where the shooting took place, and the latter had only been married a few days before the occurrence. Dickenson says they were affianced, but the woman denies it. She got married to Carswell without Dickenson's knowledge, and, maddened with jealousy, he committed the rash act. A petition is being signed for the mitigation of the sentence, as, under all the circumstances, it is considered too severe. The shot was fired in a scuffle with the woman, the ball not striking her, though the powder marked her cheek. Thomas Stone, for shooting at Constable Hughes on October 13, was sentenced to three years. The particulars of this case were given in former telegrams. The other trials were without public interest.

The Darling commenced to rise here yesterday, and is now three feet above summer level. Last night's telegrams give a rise higher up also. The state of tributaries in which there is a rise is as follows:—Louth, 6 feet 3 inches; Bourke, 5 feet 6 inches; Brewarrina, 6 feet. The M'Intyre, Barwon, and Namoi register from 5 to 12 feet. Vessels stuck in the Darling will get down; but navigation all through, up and down, is not expected unless there is more rainfall higher up.

The weather continues dry and warm, the thermometer averaging 92 degrees for the last week.

WELLINGTON, THURSDAY.

The weather is splendid for harvesting, and large quantities of hay are in the field, the gathering of which promises to be successful. The wheat has not looked so well for the past seven years. Caterpillars have greatly injured the lucerne crop. Light thunderstorms are prevailing.

COPELAND, THURSDAY.

Splendid rains have fallen.

WEST MAITLAND, THURSDAY.

In the perjury case to-day, Constable Bourke was committed for trial, the police magistrate dissenting. The case against Quinlivan was postponed for three weeks.

COOTAMUNDRA, THURSDAY.

For the vacant seat the only candidates in the field so far are Mr. Barbour and Mr. George Wallace, solicitor, Sydney. Both are actively canvassing, and are confident of success. Other candidates are expected to be nominated on Friday.

Two large stores are just about to be added to Cootamundra.

THE AUSTRAL DISASTER.

Diving operations in connection with the s.s. Austral are being busily proceeded with. There are at the present time seven divers at work, and sets of apparatus are in readiness for a further number who in a few days will be engaged. The work occupying their immediate attention is that of closing the portholes, each of which is so large that the divers use it as a means of ingress and egress to and from the interior of the vessel. The many articles of furniture floating about in the compartments greatly interfere with the men's labours, and since only a very dim light penetrates through the water and into the cabins, near the posts the divers have to grope their way about as best they can. However, experience—and among the men engaged are some who have assisted in a number of cases in raising sunken vessels—causes the sense of touch to become so acute that it in a degree compensates for the inability to see. It is stated that 15 of the principal ports were open at the time the vessel sank. These are now being closed, and the ventilators are being covered with canvas and battens, and other openings closed by means of iron plates with indiarubber "washers" and screw fastenings. On Wednesday afternoon an accident happened to one of the divers—George Murray—which nearly cost him his life. He had been under the water for some time, when suddenly, whilst he was in the interior of the vessel, there was a cessation of the supply of air. A short struggle to get through the port hole and reach the ladder, was made by him, but before he could do so he fell insensible on the floor of the cabin he was in. It appeared that the air pipe became disconnected at the point of connection with the pump. One of the attendants immediately clasped the pipe with his hand, and holding it to the pump attempted to keep up the current of air, whilst another seized the life line, pulled it, and at length, with assistance, succeeded in drawing the diver through the port-hole to the surface of the water. When the man was drawn up to the deck of the lighter, on which the pumping apparatus was worked, the glass face of his helmet had to be broken, and some of the fragments injured his face and eyes; after a lapse of some time he recovered consciousness, and eventually was able to return to his home; he was capable of resuming his work next day. The Austral is lying on a bed of soft clay, being at the bow in about six fathoms, and at the stern in about 10 fathoms of water, consequently she is in a sloping position. The promenade deck is about three feet under water, the bridge being left "high and dry." A quantity of pumping gear is on board a lighter at the side of the vessel, but it will be some time yet before it can be used; indeed, it is thought by those whose experience should cause them to be competent judges, that a very difficult task—one which will tax skill and ingenuity to its utmost—will have to be accomplished before the splendid vessel will again float on the waters of Sydney harbour.

THE CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Allow me to correct a remark or two in your article on my lecture, "Contagious Diseases Acts as measures of social reform."

Of course I gave the minority report of the House of Commons Committee prominence, the other is more widely circulated.

I affirmed that the administration of the Acts had extended and aggravated the disease, by which assertion I neither charge the doctors with maladministration, or with making their patients worse instead of better, but rather draw attention to the well-known fact that promiscuous intercourse develops, if it does not originate the malady. The false security offered invites transgression, and the practice of the licensed women is increased, and with it its concomitant—disease.

I neither directly nor indirectly suggested the registration of men. I object to the principle of the Acts, and it is very unlikely that I should advocate their extension.

The encroachment on the personal liberty of innocent females called for the denunciations it received.

I am, &c., H. WILLAN JACKSON.

The other starters were Glenorville and Polly. The winner led the most of the distance and won very easily by five lengths; Polly third horse, quarter of a mile away.

BENDIGO HANDICAP.

Lesbia	1
Balthazar	2
Squireen	3

The other starters were: Liberator, Don Quixote, Scandal, Cassiopia, and Lord of Clyde. Betting: 5 to 2 against Quixote, 3 to 1 Lord of Clyde, 6 Cassiopia and Lesbia, 7 Squireen. An excellent start was made, all abreast. Rounding the turn Cassiopia in front of Scandal, Lord of Clyde, and Squireen, all in a cluster. Lord of Clyde got level with Cassiopia. Lesbia afterwards came along inside very fast. Lesbia, Balthazar, Squireen, Cassiopia, and Lord of Clyde came up the straight all together, close to the post Lesbia drew away and won by a little over a length. Time, 2 minutes 28½ seconds.

HANDICAP STEEPLECHASE.

The Hawk	1

Other starters were Abdallah, Fire King, and Alhambra. The Hawk, who was favourite, was the only horse who did not fall or baulk.

CRICKET.

The first elevens of the Ashfield and Liverpool Clubs met at Liverpool on Saturday last, when the game resulted in a draw, slightly in favour of the local team. The scores were—Liverpool, 76; Ashfield, 8 out for 69. For Ashfield, D. Atkin and Caulwell played in good form for 27 and 14 not out respectively. For the local team, W. H. Goodman and D. Donnan showed some excellent play for 20 and 11 respectively. Atkin bowled well for the Ashfields, while Jones trundled in his usual style for Liverpool, obtaining 5 wickets for 21 runs.

How the Australians utterly upset all the calculations, or rather hopes, of an English victory at Scarborough (says an English journal) has been during a week a fruitful topic of cricket conversation. The performance was such an intrinsically good one that too much cannot be written in praise of the play of the colonists. On Friday night there was every reason for opening that the long thread of Australian triumphs would be broken by another English victory. The colonial eleven were then still in a minority of 96 runs with only nine wickets to fall, and there was a general feeling of expectation in favour of I Zingari. Unfortunately the English bowling proved to be much less effective than in the first innings. The two fast bowlers, Messrs. Evans and Forbes, between them were only able to secure three wickets, and those at a cost of 140 runs. The slower deliveries of Messrs. Steel and C. T. Studd were even more heavily punished, and Bonnor seems to have been partial to them, to judge by the rate at which he scored. Mr. Steel's one wicket was very dear at an expense of 90 runs, and Mr. Studd's two, though he had the best analysis on the side, were by no means cheap for 61 runs. Murdoch (53) and M'Donnell (42) both played excellent cricket, but it was Bannerman and Bonnor who made the game, at one time almost hopeless at the finish, bear an aspect so essentially favourable to the Australians. No greater variety could be found in style than in the play, or indeed the appearance of these two batsmen—Bannerman only 5 feet 5 inches in height, Bonnor a giant of quite 6 feet 6 inches; Bannerman, a marvel of patience, stolid in defence, Bonnor possessed of hitting capabilities equal to those of any one either of the past or present. The innings was saved before the third batsman (Murdoch) retired, but Bonnor and Bannerman made things look so well that when the game was at an end the Australians had a lead of 297 runs, with four wickets still to fall. The two batsmen just named raised the total from 256 to 423, so that as many as 167 runs were made while they were together. Of these Bonnor was responsible for as many as 122, and an idea of the pace at which he scored may be gathered from the duration of his innings, which was only an hour and three-quarters. In the match against the Gentlemen at the Oval he showed how he relished amateur bowling, particularly of the slower kinds, and on this occasion the partiality was even more pronounced. From one over of Mr. A. P. Lucas he scored 20 runs, hitting the first and third balls out of the ground for 6. He might have been caught twice at an early period of the innings by Mr. C. Marriott and Hon. E. Lyttelton, both usually safe fieldsmen, but in each case the hit was a hard one. Massie's performance in the opening match of the Australian team was perhaps a more notable one. It will be remembered that he scored 206 out of 265 runs while he was in, but Bonnor's hitting was quite as vigorous, and indeed it will rank as one of the most conspicuous feats of the season in respect of fast scoring. In point of excellence his play was of course inferior to that of Bannerman, and the latter's innings of 120 not out cannot be too highly lauded. As a correct display of batting it could not have been surpassed—worthy of Jupp in his most patient mood. He went in at 5 o'clock on Friday night, and was not out when play finally ceased on the following evening. He was thus in for more than a day, scoring 120 out of total of 423, a little more than a quarter of the aggregate. An innings of such a length without a chance is alone a curiosity, but it may be added further that there was hardly a faulty hit during its entire course. Altogether the Australians deserve the highest credit for the way in which they extricated themselves from what appeared to be an almost certain disaster, and the result is only another proof of the excellence of their all-round cricket, more particularly when the disabled condition of more than one member of the team is taken into consideration.

There is a rumour abroad in cricketing circles that the Australians are negotiating with the South Australians to play a match at Adelaide about the same time that the Hon. Ivo Bligh's team play at Sydney. Should this be true, the colony will have to meet the English Eleven without Murdoch and his comrades; and there can be no truth in the statement that the Australians agreed, while in England, not to play on their return home as an eleven in any matches except those against the Hon. Ivo Bligh's team.

From one of the London sporting papers we take the following information regarding the batting and bowling averages of the Hon. Ivo Bligh's team in matches played against the Australian Eleven:—Mr. C. T. Studd has played in seven matches, scoring 374 runs, with an average of 37·4, and taking 26 wickets at a cost of a trifle under 21 runs each. Mr. G. B. Studd played in 6 matches, and made 252 runs, with an average of 25·2. Mr. Steel has a batting average of 22, and an aggregate score of 266, but his 29 wickets have cost 25 runs each. Mr. Tylecote played four times, scoring 183 runs, and averaging 35·3. Mr. W. W. Read played four innings, all double figures, and averages 23·2. Mr. Leslie's average for five completed innings is 20·3; and Barnes's, for nine innings, 15·1. The latter has bowled very fairly, taking 15 wickets at a cost of less than 15 runs each. Morley has taken 19 wickets, with an average per wicket of 13·11.

COURSING.

Mr. J. C. Low's kennel of greyhounds will be submitted for public auction to-day at Kiss' Bazaar. The lot contains some sterling good greyhounds, who have performed well during the past coursing season, and no doubt there will be keen competition to secure the best dogs.

AQUATICS.

There was a large number of rowing men at Punch's Hotel on Wednesday evening, and the business done in the way of matchmaking shows that professional rowing is not by any means in a moribund condition. Largan, whose abilities have not been tested here as yet, was matched against Pearce for £50 a side on 30th December. The Englishman was also backed against E. Trickett for £100 a side, the contest to be decided on the 6th January; and against Macdonald for £100 a side on January 13. The races will be rowed over the champion course, Parramatta River, in best and best boats.

On Saturday last representative crews from the warehouses of Messrs. E. Prosser and Co. and Elliott Brothers met in Woolloomooloo Bay in friendly contest in two events, both of which terminated in favour of Elliott Brothers' crew. The first event, a double scull race, was won by Mullholland and Small, second and third places being occupied by their opponents; and the second race, for double sculls, was won by Mullholland and Nainby, second place being also taken by Elliott Brothers' crew.

Our Cootamundra correspondent telegraphs that the entries for the coming races there are very good.

WESTERN SUBURBS HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A flower show was held yesterday at the Ashfield School of Arts by the Western Suburbs Horticultural Society, and, considering that the recent drought has hampered the efforts of gardeners very much, the display made was in quality exceedingly good. Still, in view of the fact that a large number of residents in Ashfield, and others of the western suburbs, are men who have both the leisure and the means to foster a refined taste for floriculture, the show must be considered a miserably small one, since the hall was not half filled with exhibits. The arrangement of the flowers and plants was very good, the secretary, Mr. Melmoth Hall, assisted by the steward, Mr. Caibert, of Flora Dale nursery, having worked with energy and good judgment to secure this end. Mr. C. H. Humphrey won the first prize for the best 24 cut flowers, distinct varieties, the blooms being particularly fine. The second prize fell to Mr. D. Hunt, gardener for Mr. A. T. Holroyd. Best 12 cut flowers: 1st, Mr. J. T. Ralston; 2nd, Mr. D. Hunt. Best 12 cut double petunias: 1st, Mr. D. Hunt; 2nd and 3rd, Mr. Melmoth Hall. Best 6 cut double petunias: 1st, Mr. D. Hunt. Best 12 cut single petunias: 1st, Mr. Melmoth Hall. Best 12 cut antirrhinums: 1st, Mr. D. Hunt. Best 6 antirrhinums: 1st, Mr. J. T. Ralston; 2nd, Mr. D. Hunt. Best 12 roses: 1st, Mr. Melmoth Hall (an exceptionally fine exhibit); 2nd, Mr. D. Hunt; 3rd, Mr. Melmoth Hall. Best 6 cut pansies: 1st, Mr. J. T. Ralston; 2nd, Mr. C. H. Humphrey; 3rd, Mr. A. J. Ralston. Best drawing-room table bouquet, arranged by a lady, member of the family of an amateur, not to contain more than 24 blooms of out-door grown plants, tastefully arranged, and placed in a vase: 1st, Mrs. Corlette, a most artistic combination of ferns, flowers, and grass: 2nd, Mrs. Melmoth Hall; 3rd, Miss Latta. Best hand bouquet, arranged by a lady, member of the family of an amateur, not to contain more than 24 blooms of out-door grown plants, tastefully arranged, without paper border: 1st, Miss Nellie Devlin; 2nd, Miss Florence Devlin; 3rd, Miss Latta. Best 12 button-hole bouquets, arranged by a little girl under 12 years of age, members of the family of an amateur: 1st, Miss Constance Harding (the little clusters being very tastefully arranged); 2nd, Miss Isabel Corlette. Miss Mary Holden also sent a charming exhibit; but, unfortunately for her, they arrived at the hall too late to be allowed to compete. The show included a number of non-competitive exhibits, of which one of the finest was a large and varied collection of cut flowers, sent by Mr. Russell Barton, M.L.A., Five Dock. This was warmly admired by the judges, who, though they could not award it a prize, highly commended it. A large table bouquet, sent by Mr. J. H. Goodlet, was also highly commended, it having been sent in too late for competition. Mr. Shadforth also sent a pretty bouquet, which arrived too late for competition. Mr. W. H. Catlett, of Burwood, was represented by a splendid collection of plants and cut flowers, of which the following is the list:—Azalea Eulalie Van Gert, Azalea pittata punctata, Azalea sinensis, Burchellia capensis, Amaryllis seedling, Russellia juncea, Bougainvillea glabra, Bougainvillea lateretia, Bougainvillea spectabilias, Tecoma Lindleyana, Tecoma chirire, Tecoma velutina, Passiflora Imperatrice Eugenie pentalemon, Clematis Star of India, Delphinium formosum, Lilium thumbergianum, pentalemon, ivy-leaved pelargonium Argus, bouvardia, Jacaranda mimosæfolia, double ivy-leaved pelargonium, Tecoma jasminoides, Iris Robinsoniana. Twelve cut flowers, distinct varieties:—Azalea mortii, Azalea elegantissima, Azalea tefulgens, Azalea triumphans, Tecoma Lindleyana, Clematis Jackmanii, Clematis Lady Bovil, Amaryllis seedling, Jackaranda mimosæfolia, Tecoma velutina, Aquilegia chrysantha, Magnolia exoniensis. Tray of six cut single petunias. Tray of 12 cut flowers, not for competition. No award was made in this case, as the exhibit was sent in after the specified time. The largest and best exhibit in the show was that of Messrs. Tresider and Bartlett, which was remarkable for its single and double petunias, a few exquisite pansies, some fine roses, carnations, camellias, geraniums and phlox, a good dianthus, several well-grown caladiums, fuchsias, new and beautiful seedlings of petunias, about a dozen new coleus, ferns, including a very well-grown adiantum Farleyensi, and varied carpet bedding plants. These were arranged in a semicircle, forming a great ornament to the room, and were highly commended by the judges. Mr. John Pope had an excellent collection of plants. All were good, but an anthurium, several pelargoniums, and some of the palms were of striking beauty. Mr. Catlett also had a collection of plants and ferns, including some good palms and a fine Echmea wellbachia in flower. This plant shares with the giant aloe the peculiarity of only blooming once and then dying—a fact which is to be regretted, as its blooms of crimson and purple are particularly gorgeous. The attendance during the afternoon was good, and at night, when an amateur concert was given, there was quite a crush.

LONDON WOOL AND PRODUCE SALES.

Wool.—Messrs. Helmuth Schwartze and Co., under date London, 3rd October, report the third series of London sales of colonial wool, which commenced on the 22nd August, closed yesterday, the catalogues having comprised—Sydney, 103,970 bales against 105,349 bales in the corresponding series of last year; Port Phillip, 75,369 bales against 81,982 bales; Adelaide, 18,401 bales against 26,077; Swan River, 1,392 bales against 747; Tasmania, 9627 bales against 15,365; New Zealand, 92,657 bales against 86,209; Cape, 43,008 bales against 47,065; total catalogued, 344,424 bales against 362,694. The fresh arrivals amounted to 370,911 bales, of which 47,000 bales were forwarded direct, 16,000 bales to the interior, and 31,000 bales abroad. Including old stocks the total available was 360,000 bales, of which 320,000 bales have been sold, half for home consumption and half for export. 40,000 bales remain to be held over to next series. The sales opened about on a par with the closing rates of the preceding series, and on this level prices have remained to the end, with scarcely any fluctuation. Scoured formed a strong proportion of the Australian supplies, and from Port Phillip especially the selection was both large and good. At the outset faulty scoureds sold rather irregularly, and later on the better classes were rather easier of purchase, but the weakness was in both cases slight and transient. [illegible] Sydney and New Zealand shipments, the supply from Port Phillip being remarkably poor. Good clean lots ruled invariably firm, while middling and inferior sorts have of late been occasionally a little easier. The small supply of fleece, mainly from Sydney, sold with fair regularity. Among crossbred wools, the coarser qualities declined at first ½d to 1d per lb., but regained some of the lost ground later on. Good and superior sorts ruled evenly throughout. Lambs of the better classes met with good demand, but scoured and faulty lots were heavy of sale. Cape wools stand on the average at par with June, the better snow-whites rather higher, fleece and grease on the other hand slightly lower. The attendance throughout the series was never a large one, but there was always good competition, and prices have maintained their ground with but trifling exceptions. Supply and Deliveries:—Held over from December, 1882, 10,000 bales; ditto, 1881, 15,000 bales. Arrivals for three first series, 1882, 1,046,000 bales; ditto, 1881, 1,049,000 bales. Totals: 1882, 1,056,000; 1881, 1,064,000 bales. Forwarded direct, 1882, 126,000 bales; ditto, 1881, 90,000 bales. Actually sold, 1882, 890,000 bales; ditto, 1881, 929,000 bales. Totals—1882, 1,016,000 bales; 1881, 1,019,000 bales. Held over, 1882, 40,000 bales; ditto, 1881, 45,000 bales. The quantity sold in London falls short of last year's total by 39,000 bales; but as the wools forwarded direct show a corresponding increase, viz., 36,000 bales, the total passed into consumption is very nearly the same in both years. The shares taken by the Home and Foreign trades respectively are shown in the following:—Home Consumption, 1882, forwarded direct 30,000 bales, bought in London 400,000—430,000; 1881, forwarded direct 16,000, bought in London 404,000—420,000. Export: 1882, forwarded direct 96,000 bales, bought in London 490,000—586,000; 1881, forwarded direct 74,000, bought in London 525,000—599,000. Total deliveries: 1882, 1,016,000 bales; 1881, 1,019,000. Of the wools sold in public sale the home share is 45 per cent.; taking the wools forwarded direct also into account it is 42 per cent. Last year the percentages were 44 and 41. The fourth series is to commence on Tuesday, the 21st November. The following are the quantities held over, and the new arrivals up to date:—Sydney, 10,000 bales held over; 9581 bales arrived. Port Phillip, 13,000 bales held over; 11,560 bales arrived. Adelaide, 1400 bales held over; 5029 bales arrived. Tasmania, 200 bales held over; 229 bales arrived. New Zealand, 5400 bales held over; 10,510 bales arrived. Cape, 10,000 bales held over; 18,424 bales arrived: Total, 40,000 bales held over; 55,182 bales arrived. Altogether about 100,000 bales fresh arrivals (including 20 to 25,000 bales of the new clip) may be expected, so that with the 40,000 bales held over and allowing for 20,0000 bales to be forwarded, about 120,000 bales (90,000 Australian and 30,000 bales Cape) will be at disposal. Last year, the quantity available in the last series was about 127,000 bales (87,000 bales Australian and 40,000 bales Cape.) A low wool sale, comprising about 5500 bales, will be held here to-morrow.

Tallow, Hides, &c.—The New Zealand Loan and Mercantile Agency Company report, under date 5th October:—Tallow: The sales at public auction since our last advice amount to 1744 casks out of a total of 3054 casks brought forward. The demand has been less brisk, and prices have in consequence drooped perceptibly for some descriptions. Inferior qualities have been more difficult of sale than for some time past, and lower prices were accepted for the portion most recently sold. Holders, however, have been unwilling to press sales, and up to the present, no important change in values has to be recorded. Fine parcels, on the other hand, have well maintained the position occupied a fortnight ago and at latest auctions, held on 29th ultimo, some pale mutton of prime quality, to be used for a special purpose, sold as high as 47s per cwt. The market, though quiet for the present, is steady at our quotations. We quote—P. Y. C., 54s per cwt.; Australian mutton, fine, 45s 6d to 46s 6d per cwt.; ditto, medium, 44s 6d to 45s per cwt.; Australian beef, fine, 44s 6d to 45s; ditto, medium, 43s to 44s per cwt. The estimated stock in warehouse is 14,342 casks, of which 181 casks are Russian, and in addition to these other 400 casks Russian are now being landed. Importations during the fortnight ending 30th ultimo have been 2710 casks. For to-morrow's auctions 1712 casks are advertised. Leather.—For last public sales, held on 22nd ultimo, 10,016 sides were catalogued and 7084 sold at and immediately after the auction. There was a decided improvement in the inquiry, and competition was much more general than of late. We have not any material alteration in prices to note, but higher rates were then obtainable than at the previous public auctions. We quote—Fair to good sides, heavy, 12½lb. to 16½lb. each, 10d to 11½d per lb.; ditto, light, 9½lb. to 11½lb., 10d to 11d; ditto, extra heavy, 18lb. to 24lb., 10d to 10½d; ditto, seconds, 10½lb. to 15½lb., 9½d to 10½d. Importations during the fortnight ending 30th ultimo amounted to 1367 bales. Basils: On 22nd ultimo, 87,987 skins were offered at public auction, and 57,147 sold under the hammer. As has been the case for some time past, there was strong bidding for the better descriptions, which all found a ready sale at the high rates recently current. The commoner qualities and heavy averages generally have been dull of sale, and for the few disposed of rather easier rates were accepted, the bought in portion consisting entirely of shipments of one or other of these classes. We quote: Best strained skins, averaging 7½lb. to 19½lb. per dozen, 12½d to 16½d per lb.; seconds, averaging 10lb. to 20½lb., 11½d to 13½d; unstrained, averaging 7½lb. to 21lb., 8½d to 12½d. Salted Hides.—On 21st ultimo 12,625 hides were brought to auction, and 8417 sold. There was a satisfactory demand at prices fully equal to those quoted in our last circular. We quote: Sydney heavy ox, 5½d to 5¾d per lb.; light ditto, 4½d to 5½d; seconds, 4½d to 4½d; cow, 4½d to 5d. The present stock is 11,587 hides, as against 14,510 on 22nd ultimo. Preserved Meats.—The inquiry has fallen off somewhat, only a moderate business having been transacted, and that of a retail character. Prices generally are easier, with a further downward tendency. We quote:—Boiled mutton: 2lb. tins, 5½d to 5½d per lb.; 4lb. tins, 5½d to 5½d per lb.; 6lb. tins, 5½d to 5½d per lb. Boiled beef: 2lb. tins, 5½d to 5½d per lb.; 4lb. tins, 5½d to 5½d per lb.; 6lb. tins, 4½d to 5½d per lb. Importations during the fortnight ending 30th ultimo amounted to 10,526 cases from Australia and 9589 cases from New York. Frozen Meats.—The market during the past week has been very dull for all descriptions of mutton and beef, under the pressure of heavy supplies. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in effecting sales of frozen produce, and a sharp decline in values has been the result. Of the Australian importation per Garonne (s.) some 2500 carcases have been already dealt with at an average of fully 6d. per lb., but under existing circumstances this figure is not being maintained. Of the Mataura's New Zealand consignment only some 1500 have been marketed. The latter have yielded an average price believed to be about 5d per lb., sales having been in some cases made at considerably lower rates, although for a small proportion 6d per lb. has, we learn, been reached. The meat is coming to hand in satisfactory condition, but the over supplies abovementioned have not admitted of its disposal at full rates. We quote home fed meats to-day as follows: Good English and Scotch beef (bodies), 4s to 5s 2d per 8 lbs.; ditto ditto mutton (carcases), 4s 8d to 6s 2d ditto. Copra.—We have to report a continuance throughout the fortnight of the strong demand for this product, and at the same time to quote a distinct advance in values. Sun-dried Sydney of good quality is now worth £19 10s per ton, while kiln-dried would find purchasers at £17 10s to £18 per ton. With the prospect of moderate imports in the immediate future the market closes steady. Cocoa Nut Oil.—There has been rather less business doing in this article lately, but prices have improved slightly. We quote—Ceylon firm at £31 per ton in pipes, and £31 10s per ton in hogsheads; Cochin at £35 10s to £36 10s per ton. Mother o' Pearl Shell.—The market is in a satisfactory position, but as is usual between sales, no business is reported. We repeat our note of prices realised at last auctions, held on 5th ultimo, viz.:—Fair, slightly wormy to fine bold, white, clean, £7 10s to £9 2s 6d per cwt.; defective, £4 7s 6d to £5 2s 6d ditto; chicken, £6 5s to £10 12s 6d ditto; broken, £5 to £5 10s ditto; New Zealand green ear shells, 5 cases sold at 5d per dozen and 3 cases at 1s 1¼d dozen.

NEWS BY THE ENGLISH MAIL, VIA SUEZ.

The English mail per P. and O. steamer Kaiser-i-Hind was delivered from the General Post Office yesterday morning. We have received London papers to the 6th October, from which the following extracts are taken :—

THE EGYPTIAN QUESTION.

The following are some interesting items relating to the Egyptian Question :—The République Française refuses to believe that England will have exclusive influence in Egypt. The support of France is necessary to England herself after her victory. The [illegible] says that England must now settle her account with Europe. She will not receive from her expedition the advantages anticipated. "The Egyptian question in its present phase," says the République, "is to our eyes of exceptional importance, because upon the solution which will be given to this question will depend the nature of the future relations between France and Great Britain. It is unfortunately but too true that if the British Government, contrary to our belief and to our information, intends pursuing an exclusive policy, if it justifies the accusations of egotism which are not spared from certain quarters, the entente cordiale between the two countries will have to face a crisis."

M. de Lesseps has addressed the following telegram to the president of the court-martial which is to try Arabi:—"Paris, October 5.—Learning that Arabi is to appear before Egyptian justice, it is my duty to offer spontaneous testimony on my relations with him during my stay on the Canal, from the bombardment to the landing of the English at Ismailia. I hold at the Court's disposal 16 postal and telegraphic messages, showing that our relations were foreign to all politics and bore on the maintenance of the Canal's neutrality and the protection of the lives and interests of the Europeans who had remained in Egypt, and who, to the number of 15,000, were able, thanks to Arabi's orders, to come and receive hospitality at Ismailia, and reach in safety Port Said, Alexandria, or their own country."

The Paris correspondent of the Times writes on October 5 :—Now that M. [illegible]'s organs are so vehemently insisting that French rights in Egypt have not been impaired by non-intervention, it is well to recall the consequences of non-intervention as predicted by M. Gambetta on July 18. In supporting the first vote of credit and criticising it only as inadequate, he said : "At the cost of the greatest sacrifices, do not break with the English alliance. I know what may be alleged, but all ambiguity must be got rid of, and I will state my mind fully. I am assuredly an enlightened and sincere friend of the English, but not to the length of sacrificing French interests. Rest assured, moreover, that the English, being good politicians, esteem allies only who make themselves respected and their interests taken into account. Now—I make a clean breast of it, for I have nothing to conceal—the very thing which draws me to the English alliance and to English co-operation in the Mediterranean basin and in Egypt is, that, besides this disastrous rupture, what I most dread is your giving up to England, and that for ever, territories, rivers, and channels in which your right of living and trading is equal to hers. It is not, therefore, to humble or attenuate French interests that I am an advocate of the English alliance. It is because I believe that they can be effectively defended only by this union, by this co-operation. If there is a rupture all will be lost." A correspondent of the Daily News who travelled from Zagazig to Cairo, says:—"At En Chass, where we passed one night at the house of a Greek who had remained shut up therein since the bombardment of the Alexandria forts, I learned some interesting particulars as to what occurred after the capture of Tel-el-Kebir. Arabi, accompanied by a superior officer, and about 20 horsemen, reached the station on horseback at half-past 12 on the day of the fight. The horses could hardly stand, and man and beast looked as if they could go no further. They waited at the station for the usual train coming from Cairo, and immediately it arrived the engine was reversed and Arabi and his party proceeded by it to the capital. During the next hour about 150 horsemen in sorry plight passed by in groups of five or 10. For the following few days a number of stragglers, all of whom were without arms, came along and dispersed among the villages. A good many were sick or wounded, and were helped along by companions. My informant told me that as the stragglers passed along the line they chanted the praises of the Queen, who had dispersed Arabi's army and allowed them to return to their homes. When it was known that Arabi had been defeated there was quite a panic among the peasantry. Women went about screaming that the Nazarenes were coming, crying and wringing their hands. All the cattle were driven into the villages, and the inhabitants remained shut up with them for the whole day. When, however, they saw that our soldiers did not interfere with them, they went out and resumed their usual occupations. Most of the people seemed perfectly indifferent as to who governed them, and many told me plainly that they did not care to whom they paid their taxes, whether it was the Sultan, the Khedive, or the English, so long as they were left in peace to follow their agricultural pursuits. They seemed particularly to object to having their friends and relatives torn away from their midst to swell the ranks of the army, and to be compelled to furnish contributions of straw and barley."

The circumstances surrounding the death of Captain J. C. Wardell, of the Royal Marines, at the storming of Tel-el-Kebir, are particularly distressing. His third child was born on the day on which he was killed, and the news was not broken to Mrs. Wardell until some time after. Captain Wardell's mother, who is the widow of a major in the army, has to mourn the loss of a second son who has lost his life in the service of his country, her elder son, Captain George W. Wardell, of the 24th Regiment, having been killed at Isandula.

The Cairo correspondent of the Times states that on October 5 "the Mahmal or annual procession of the sacred carpet to Mecca took place with due honours rendered by the British authorities to this singular ceremony. Until seven years ago it was considered too sacred to go by steamer, but made a long journey through the desert. Until this year it always marched to Suez. This year it goes by train. The caravan made seven circuits in the square formed by the British troops, and then advanced to the Khedive, who had the Duke of Connaught on his right and Sir E. Malet and Sir G. Wolseley on his left. The Khedive kissed the tassel of the carpet. Then, preceded by long files of British infantry, native infantry, and native cavalry, it filed through the narrow native quarters, and then by Esbekieh to the station. Here, however, either the camel or the religious bodies refused to go on, and the sacred carpet was not allowed to follow the soldiers who escorted only the singing worshippers from the mosque, while the chief part of the procession broke off by another route. The occasion was a good one for judging the demeanour of the crowd at this their greatest fête. They were as impassive onlookers as at the Khedive's arrival. Some people consider the British escort a mistake, as likely to confirm the ridiculous stories about our acting under the orders of the Sultan. I myself doubt whether 10 per cent. of the population even think at all."

The War Department have made arrangements for the disposal of the troops in Egypt. The following remain in occupation :—To garrison Alexandria: 2nd Royal Irish Regiment, 2nd Cornwall Light Infantry, 1st West Kent Regiment (one-half). To garrison Cairo: 1st Royal Highlanders, 1st Sussex Regiment, 1st South Stafford Regiment, 1st Berks Regiment, 1st Shropshire Regiment, 3rd Royal Rifles, 2nd Highlander Light Infantry, 1st Gordon Highlanders, 1st Cameron Highlanders. To garrison Cyprus: 1st West Kent Regiment (second half), with the strong infantry depot and artillery reserve already existing. The cavalry and artillery force for distribution in Egypt will be the 8th Dragoon Guards, 19th Hussars, No. 5 and No. 6 garrison batteries 1st Brigade, Scottish Division, Royal Artillery; G Battery, B Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery; N Battery, 2nd Brigade; D Battery, 1st Brigade, Royal Artillery.

THE PHŒNIX PARK MURDERS.

A correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, on October 4, telegraphs from Dublin :—Notwithstanding the fact that close upon six months have elapsed since Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke were murdered in the Phœnix Park, Dublin, the London, Dublin, and Liverpool police are still engaged in investigating the mystery of the murder. Their efforts have been to some extent successful. The daggers used in the assassination were found in Dublin, or, as one report states, in the suburbs, about two months ago. The weapons are described as knives, whose blades are about three-quarters of an inch in breadth and fully 9 inches long, with a small handle. They were very sharp and of good steel. It is considered certain that they are of English make, and had not been purchased in Ireland, the shape being peculiar, resembling a narrow carving-knife.

Naturally the police are very reticent about the discovery, but it has transpired that several arrests were made in consequence of it, though some of the officials are inclined to the opinion that these arrests, which were made under the Life and Property Protection Act, rather hindered investigation into the crime. Once within the prison, there was less opportunity of watching and following up the movements of suspected persons. The occupant of the house in which the weapons were found was imprisoned, and only liberated recently, after six weeks' detention. There are now believed to have been ten persons concerned in the murders, mostly Irish, but with a minority of Irish-Americans. Westgate's statement that he was paid for taking part in the assassination is not corroborated by any of the information which the authorities have received. The police have reason to believe that the murderers are still in Ireland, and suspicion points to the individuals, but unless the aid of an informer can be secured, there is no evidence on which the crime can be brought home to the guilty parties. There is said to be little doubt that the car was a private and not a public vehicle. At the time of the discovery of the knives it is reported they had upon them signs of blood, and they were subsequently sent to public analysts for examination.

IRELAND.

The Home News says :—"The release of Mr. Gray, editor of the Freeman's Journal, is a happy sign that Ireland is entering on a new period of quiet. Judge Lawson has so far reconsidered his sentence as to admit that Mr. Gray has sufficiently expiated his offence by the portion of imprisonment which he has already undergone. There are those who consider that the relegation of the offending editor to gaol was a somewhat impolitic measure at best. He had no doubt done grievous wrong in questioning the honesty of an Irish jury, and for such conduct merited some severe rebuke. This would probably have been sufficient punishment for the contempt of court of which Mr. Gray was guilty, and it would have saved the law from the humiliation of being exposed without redress to much greater and more deliberate contempts. One of the effects of Mr. Gray's imprisonment was to elicit protests and votes of sympathy for Mr. Gray from numerous public bodies, of which no notice was taken. It is now said that the Dublin Corporation means to go further, and propose to petition Parliament to put some limitation to a Judge's powers in cases of contempt of Court."

Michael Walsh (brother of Patrick Walsh, who was lately hanged at Galway for murder) was found guilty, after a three days' trial at Dublin, of being an accessory to the murder of Constable Kavanagh, at Letterfrack. The jury recommended the prisoner to mercy on the ground of his youth, but Mr. Justice Lawson sentenced him to death.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On October 4 M. Grévy invested Monseigneur Czacki with the Cardinal's hat. The usual ceremonial was observed. The President sent his carriage for the Nuncio, who is still in a very weak condition, and had to be supported by two of his suite.

Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Dressing, of the Hon. Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms, died on October 2, at Crofton, near Fareham, aged 64. The deceased served with the 58th Regiment in the New Zealand War, and was present at the storming of Kawiti's Pah, at Ruapekapeka, in January, 1846, after which he proceeded to the valley of Hutt, and served there during different operations.

Amsterdam intends her coming International Exhibition to be a great success. Elaborate arrangements are now being made for the buildings, which are to include numerous annexes and to cover 70 acres of ground, while the visitors will be enlivened by the music of all nations, and a captive balloon rivalling the Paris monster of 1878. The Exhibition will, however, be chiefly devoted to colonial products and articles connected with the export trade, and the Dutch are particularly anxious to compare their own colonial exhibits with those of our Indian, African, and Australian possessions. The British colonies will be largely represented, and a special commission has also been formed for Great Britain.

The circumstances of a distressing case of suicide by a husband in the presence of his wife were investigated on October 2 by the County Dublin Coroner. The deceased was Mr. Hugh Graham, a solicitor, aged 30, who resided in the Clontarf suburbs. Mrs. Graham, the widow, stated that she had been married between four and five years, and had two children. Deceased was a very temperate man, and he and witness had always lived very happily together, never having had any dispute since their marriage. He was about seven years back from Australia, where he had been for a few years practising at his profession. Whilst there he received a sunstroke which affected his head with violent pains. The previous morning he arose from his bed and appeared to be searching for something in the wardrobe. Witness asked him what had happened, and he answered that he was looking for some tobacco. She procured some in the pantry, and brought a small breakfast knife to cut it with. On re-entering the bedroom she perceived a startled expression on his face. She placed the knife on the table, a short distance from the bed, and was proceeding to dress her infant, when deceased jumped suddenly from the bed, ran to the table, and, taking up the knife, was about to cut his throat, when witness seized him and shouted for assistance. The servant, witness's mother, and a man who lives in the next house rushed to her aid, caught hold of deceased, but they were unable to prevent his severing the jugular vein, from which he died.

"Anglo Australian" writes in the European Mail: "It is an unsavoury subject, but as I referred to the Claimant in my last, I ought to mention that, for believers in the wrongs of 'an unfortunate nobleman,' a sad disaster has now befallen the consort and offspring of the imprisoned 'Baronet.' This is nothing less than the admission of 'Lady' Tichborne, with two of her children, to the South Stoneham Union, near Southampton. As her 'ladyship' has been so long supported on the largesse of sundry enthusiasts who refuse to be convinced against their will the question will be asked, how came this sudden drop into pauperism? How, indeed; why simply that her 'ladyship' is encumbered with a second young family, and on discovering this very damaging fact even the most ardent Tichbornites have turned away disgusted, and declined to give a dole to such an undeserving character as the consort of the Claimant appears to be. When "Sir Roger" does emerge from his enforced seclusion, however, he will find that his own children have not been left uncared for, as their education has been for some time looked after by some Tichbornites who have subscribed the requisite funds."

A NEW STYLE OF POT.
MOORE'S HOUSEHOLD REMEDY is now put up in a very light pot, which contains more ointment than the former larger pot.

UNSOLICITED EVIDENCE:
"Dear Sir,—My daughter had something the matter with her face for 18 months, near the ear; she could scarcely eat for pain. Anyone could hear her jaw knock while she was eating. I had advice from two doctors, but done her no good; then I tried your Household Remedy Ointment. After three times rubbing it was quite well. I think it my duty to tell you, hoping it might be some benefit to some other person.
"C. BROADLEY.
"Hordern-street, Newtown, July 5, 1882.
"To Dr. Moore."

This is the only ointment which ever received certificates from the managers of all the foundries in Sydney. It removes all pain from a burn or scald in three minutes, and speedily cures sores, cuts, bruises, sore lips, sore throats, ringworms, swellings, &c. THE SALE of PARK HILL.

THE CENTRE OF GRANVILLE.

TO-MORROW.

WATKIN and WATKIN have been entrusted with the sale of THIS UNEQUALLED ESTATE, and will sell on above date.

To inform local residents WHERE PARK HILL IS, or WHAT PARK HILL IS LIKE, would be to imply ignorance, which we would be the last to so imply; but as THE GENERAL PUBLIC will not, when once the advantages possessed by this estate are pointed out, be willing to allow The LOCAL BUYERS to have it all their own way, it may be well to state that PARK HILL ESTATE is the highest land in the neighbourhood, commanding views in all directions.

THAT PARK HILL occupies a position which no other Property can, being so situate as to be within easy access of the various large manufactories and of the station.

That it has EXTENSIVE FRONTAGES to the Woodville and other good roads, all 66 feet wide.

That it has been liberally subdivided.

That the land has been stumped and cleared in a manner such as no other estate in the district has been, and which has called forth encomiums, not only from the Press, but from every vendor or purchaser of land who has seen it.

That the terms are as liberal as could be wished for—10 per cent. deposit, balance by 36 monthly or 12 quarterly payments (at the option of the buyer), with interest at the low rate of 5 per cent. If cash paid within three months, no interest. If paid within one month, 2½ per cent. discount.

That the TITLE is under TORRENS' ACT.

Vendor furnishing the necessary particulars to enable any buyer to prepare his transfer and obtain his deed at the small cost of 30s and the stamp duty.

WE COURT INSPECTION—Critical, fault-finding inspection, if you like.

Go round the Estate, and over it, and you will say that in our advertisement we fail to give anything like an idea of the Beauty and Advantages of PARK HILL.

Auctioneers—HARDIE and GORMAN.

Solicitors—DAINTREY and JONES.

Title under TORRENS' ACT, TORRENS' ACT.

24 ACRES FOR SALE.

All cleared and covered with beautiful turf.
The most charming position in the whole of the celebrated RYDE DISTRICT.

Deep Rich Soil. No Rocks and Stone.
WATER FRONTAGES, MAIN ROAD FRONTAGES.
Frontages to Roads 99 feet and 66 feet wide.

Lovely view from every lot on the ground without exception. Views of the Parramatta River, the Rhine of New South Wales, Views of the Blue Mountains, Views of Mount Jellore, near Berrima, and of the CELEBRATED GIB.

Views of all the low-lying country about ASHFIELD, BURWOOD, &c.

The whole property is a gradual slope from Morrison-road (66 feet wide) to Parramatta River, thus giving every lot an independent view.

Only 6 miles from Sydney by the new bridges, now open to traffic.

Only 3 minutes from the tramway line, now being constructed.

Only 5 minutes from the wharf, where new steamers ply hourly to and from Sydney and Parramatta, in connection with Jeanneret's tramway.

Only 7 minutes from the proposed station of the Great Northern Railway from Sydney to Newcastle.

Only three-quarters of an hour's drive from Sydney by the new bridges.

Adjacent to the Government Reserve, on the banks of the Parramatta River.

The views are much grander than those from the beautiful Drummoyne Estate, just sold for over £40,000.

Investors who were unable to obtain lots at Drummoyne should at once inspect BEACONSFIELD, RYDE.

Now is the time to see what the soil will produce, for the oats in an adjacent property (Mr. Manning's) are over 6 feet high, notwithstanding the bad season, and the fruit trees and grapevines are covered with fruit.

RYDE, the Garden of the Colony.

RYDE, the Switzerland of the Colony.

RYDE, a close borough no longer, but at last thrown open to the lover of scenery and to the horticulturist.

RYDE, the haven for invalids and for mothers of families.

RYDE, a HOME FOR EVERY ONE (except Medical men—they can't live there).

Churches of all denominations in the village of Ryde.

Excellent schools and good shops, where every requisite can be obtained at Sydney prices.

Every convenience for building, large steam brick works existing in the village, and stone quite handy.

Go up and see "Beaconsfield" for yourselves, and take your wives with you. Steamers from King-street all day long.

TITLE, UNDER TORRENS' ACT.

BEACONSFIELD,
THAT MAGNIFICENT BLOCK OF PROPERTY, the celebrated PICNIC GROUNDS of RYDE, formerly known as FIG-TREE HILL,
bounded by PARRAMATTA RIVER on the south, and by MORRISON-ROAD on the north, and surrounded by the properties of Messrs. C. Blaxland, P. Allen, Timothy Small, Sir George Innes, and others, close to the residence of JOHN EDYE MANNING, Esq. It is also near to the Great Northern Railway route sanctioned by Parliament, and now being proceeded with, and is ONLY SIX MILES FROM SYDNEY by the TRAMWAY ROUTE over the NEW BRIDGES.

☞ The views of PARRAMATTA RIVER and BLUE MOUNTAINS are unsurpassed even by the choicest positions on the celebrated BRUSH FARM.

The property is subdivided into LARGE ALLOTMENTS by LICENSED SURVEYOR KNAPP in such a way that every lot will command a view of the various bends of the RIVER and its charming surroundings.

☞ PHOTOGRAPHIC and large PANORAMIC VIEWS have been taken, and are on view at the Sale Rooms.

☞ LITHOGRAPHIC PLANS AT OUR ROOMS.

☞ SPECIAL STEAMER to the Ground TO-MORROW.

The TERMS of SALE will be exceptional, viz.:—10 per cent. DEPOSIT, balance by 6 quarterly payments, with 6 per cent. interest added.

TORRENS' TITLE.

HARDIE and GORMAN have received instructions to sell by public auction, at their Sale Room, in PITT-STREET, at 11.30 o'clock,
MONDAY, 20th NOVEMBER,

For absolute sale.

BURWOOD NORTH.

MAGNIFICENT ORANGERY with RESIDENCE, known as BEACONSFIELD.
And also, VALUABLE BLOCKS FREEHOLD LAND, more particularly described hereunder, and which are in the market in consequence of the decision of the resident proprietor to retire to England.

LOT 1.
BEACONSFIELD ORANGERY with RESIDENCE, Comprising an area of 5½ ACRES, opposite the recreation reserve, at the junction of BROUGHTON-STREET and CRANE-STREET, distant about 20 minutes' walk from Burwood Railway Station, and not half that distance from the Parramatta-road.
☞ The ORANGERY, which includes some 800 trees, in FULL BEARING, is a PERFECT GEM, is highly remunerative, and will challenge comparison with any other in the colony. The ground is all thoroughly trenched and drained, carefully laid out, and planted and surrounded by a grand hedge of English hawthorn.
No expense has been spared by the proprietor in his determination to make BEACONSFIELD, small though it be, the PREMIER ORANGERY of New South Wales.
☞ The residence is tastily arranged, complete in all its details, and in first-class order throughout.
Inspection is invited.

LOT 2.
5-ACRE ORANGERY BLOCK, close to Lot 1, and fronting BROUGHTON-STREET. There is a 4-roomed cottage on the Block, also a 2-roomed Cottage; and about 3 ACRES are already planted out and fenced with paling fence.
☞ A SPLENDID BLOCK for a RESIDENCE or for a profitable ORANGERY, or the land will sell well in subdivision.
Inspection is invited.

LOT 3.
5-ACRE BLOCK, fenced in and cleared, adjoining Lot 2. This is a really capital site, very clear, and gently sloping to the creek at back of the land; well suited for ORANGERY, RESIDENTIAL, or SALE purposes.

LOT 4.
5½-ACRE BLOCK, opposite to Lot 2, and fronting BROUGHTON-STREET, GLADSTONE-STREET, and another street,
☞ This is a capital Block for subdivision.
Inspection is invited.

HARDIE and GORMAN have received instructions from CHARLES ELOUIS, Esq. (on account of his early departure for England) to sell by PUBLIC AUCTION, at their SALE ROOMS, in PITT-STREET, at 11.30 o'clock,
WEDNESDAY, 6th DECEMBER,
BEACONSFIELD ORCHARD and RESIDENCE, and also TWO well-positioned BLOCKS of LAND, close by, as described above.

The AUCTIONEERS invite inspection of all THREE PROPERTIES as an INVESTMENT or for a RESIDENCE. The ORCHARD is a STERLING PROPERTY, and the other TWO BLOCKS are admirably positioned for dealing with either in BLOCKS or in subdivision.
The SOIL is RICH and DEEP, and its productive capabilities are evidenced in the luxuriant growth and healthy conditions of the TREES.

☞ The sale is absolute and determined, in consequence of Mr. Elouis' return to England, so buyers had better inspect without delay, as there is money in every lot.

⁂ Beaconsfield is within 20 minutes' walk of Burwood station, the other side of Parramatta-road. Cabs or waggonettes can always be hired on the stand at Burwood station.

☞ Plan of the whole of these properties has been prepared by Messrs. REUSS and HALLORAN, and can be seen at the ROOMS.

MILLS, PILE, and GILCHRIST have been favoured with instructions from the TRUSTEES of the LAWSON ESTATE to sell by public auction, on the GROUND, on SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18th, at half-past 3 sharp,
The ABOVE FIRST-CLASS subdivision of BUILDING BLOCKS, in the choice SUBURB of WAVERLEY.

The AUCTIONEERS, in inviting attention to this sale, would draw special attention that this is not a speculation sale but a trustee's sale. The sale of a property which has long been locked up, and is now being in due and proper course placed in the market in allotments, so that the good thing should not fall to the lot of a speculator, but should be divided among the members of that important body—

THE PUBLIC.

PLAN can be seen at the Rooms; and lithos., prepared by Mr. Surveyor BINSTED, can be obtained at the Rooms.

The Trustees have agreed to the following liberal terms of sale:—
TEN PER CENT. DEPOSIT,
BALANCE IN 18 MONTHLY PAYMENTS, with interest at the rate of 6 PER CENT. Per Annum, payable monthly with the instalments, and lessening month by month.

THE SALE WILL TAKE PLACE ON SATURDAY, 18th INSTANT,

Most Liberal Terms.
No Interest.
COME!

I WILL COME, for there are six reasons for so doing:—

1. Because it is within reasonable distance of Sydney, and costs only a nominal sum per day to go to and fro by train.
2. Because this portion of the County of Cumberland is advancing in value more rapidly than any other.
3. Because I wish to make provision for my old age, and my children when I am gone; consequently, select property which must double itself in value within two or three years.
4. Because by purchasing land at Orchardleigh I obtain six good things—good land, good position, good neighbours, good water, good schooling for my children, and good value for my money.
5. Because there is on the Estate a store, a post-office, a public school, and other evidences of progressive civilisation.
6. Because it will require but a small effort to obtain a home of my own; 6d per day is 15s per month, 15s per month will pay for a £12 allotment, 1s per day is 30s per month, and will pay for a £24 allotment; further, if money is wanted, the allotment or allotments can be sold at a profit. So, ORCHARDLEIGH FOR EVER!

NEVER FEAR! I WILL BE THERE.
